Major Changes in Style in '58 Fords

The 1958 Ford car line featuring major styling changes, the most efficient engines in the car's history, a new automatic transmission and new optional air suspension, went on display last Thursday at the Lohaus Motor company showrooms in O'Neill and at Ford dealership throughout the country.

"At a cost of $185,000,000 we have developed a new Ford that incorporates some of the most extensive changes ever made in the car," said J. O. Wright, Ford vice-president and general manager of the Ford division.

Historically, auto companies have made basic changes in their cars every three years, he pointed out.

"But in its 1958 models, Ford has actually created fundamental design and engineering changes just one year after its completely new 1957 model," he said.

Demonstrating this change are twenty-one models on two separate wheelbases; the Fairlane and Fairlane 500, with an overall length of 207 inches, and the Custom, Custom 300 and the station wagon, measuring 202 inches.

The external appearance of the new car features Ford's sculptured-in-metal treatment in which styling lines are molded into the sheet metal itself.

The new distinctive styling is emphasized in a front view of the massive wrap-around one-piece bumper with anodized aluminum "jet intake" grille, dual headlights, and Power Flow hood. New sheet metal treatment incorporates redesigned front fenders, new roof with seven front-to-rear flutes or grooves, and trunk lid and rear quarter panel innovations. From the rear, the 1958 Ford is distinctive with a "V" sculptured trunk lid flaring into twin safety oval taillights.
