Tepner Prospect for Congress?

LINCOLN — Some Holt and Boyd democratic leaders would like to see Lawrence Brock, Wakefield farmer file for governor. It was Brock who came within a hair of upending Robert Harrison, Norfolk republican, in the Third district congressional race last year.

The Third is a traditional republican stronghold. These demorepublican believe another demorepublican, possibly Jess Tepner of Creighton, can be groomed to knock-off Harrison.

Water R. Raecke, 62, Central City attorney, several times has been the unsuccessful gubernatorial candidate on the democratic ballot. His position is in doubt.

Raecke found previous attempts strenuous and costly, he has told friends.

There still is a preponderance of republicans who have filed for the 1958 elections in Nebraska, with no immediate signs of an influx of democratic candidates.

The democratic party, however, is hard at work trying to raise money and candidates to put on a campaign in 1958.

Governor Anderson is seeking his second term on the republican ticket and has indicated he will campaign again on republican approach to state government and a "tight" budget.

The political activity is not expected to intensify until after the year-end holidays.

40-Hour Week
 The state capitol employees have received a long-awaited Christmas present — a 40-hour week.

Agitation for the four-hour shorter week has been growing in recent years. A bill was enacted by the 1953 legislature calling for 40-hour week but it was vetoed by Gov. Robert Crosby because of legal errors in it.

The 1957 legislature took up the matter again, passing legislation authorizing the governor to decide whether the 1,900 employees in the capitol could work less.

Gov. Victor Anderson said he surveyed all department heads and they informed him the 40-hour week could be inaugurated without adding to expenditures — providing the statehouse is closed on Saturday mornings.

So, the governor decreed that beginning January 4 the offices in the building will be closed on Saturday morning, and employees would work eight hours a day, five days a week.

On a trial basis, the building will remain open Saturday morning for tourists and a guide will be on duty. If the traffic does not warrant keeping the guide on duty, Governor Anderson said the entire building, except for the supreme court, would be closed.

The court must remain open six days a week, under law, to permit last minute filings.

As a practical matter, the governor said he will not authorize a 40-hour week where spending of money is involved. The legislature specifically exempted the safety patrol, and personnel at truck weighing scales and ports of entry.

However, it is felt the 40-hour week will come eventually to other state employees.

The University of Nebraska now is on a staggered 40-hour week, keeping a skeleton force on for two days a week.

The other big agency is the board of control which supervises

16 state institutions. For the board to switch now would cause the expenditure of large sums of money.

But eventually, to keep personnel, the board will have to put its employees on a shorter week.

Most state employees now work 44 hours or more.

The problem in state government, which has been growing acute each year, especially in the statehouse, is attracting and keeping employees who can get better benefits in private industry.

In order to get their 40-hour week, statehouse workers had to agree to give up five of 11 holidays — Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays, Arbor day, Columbus day and veterans day.

They will get off for new years day, Christmas, memorial day, Fourth of July, labor day, and Thanksgiving.

In addition, some offices will have to remain open during the noon hour and Governor Anderson said employees will have to produce the same volume of work as was done under the 44-hour week.

Sales Tax
 There is no question but the matter of a sales tax will be a big one for the 1959 legislature to handle.

In 1957, the state narrowly missed having the levy substituted for the property tax — now the main source of tax revenue for state government operation.

The question is whether it will be the result of a petition drive announced by the Nebraska State Education association, or the result of legislative action.

Under the constitution, Nebraska cannot have a sales and income tax as well as a property tax.

So, the NSEA wants to have the people vote on the question of enacting a sales tax.

In the amendment as originally proposed, would be the method of apportionment of sales tax revenue.

NSEA officials said some of the sales tax revenue would be sent back to local subdivisions of government to help relieve the burden on property owners.

There is some opposition developing to the NSEA proposal; a lot concerning the apportionment formula which the association wants written into the constitution.

To put the question on the November 1958, ballot, the NSEA needs about 57,000 valid signatures by July of next year.

Don Kline, NSEA executive secretary, says he has "no idea" how the association can finance a petition drive.

State Banks
 Nebraska has about $21.8 million deposited in 165 of the state's 400 banks, for which it gets no interest and Sen. Terry Carpenter wants to change this.

Carpenter, head of a tax investigating committee, has called representatives of the banks and State Treasurer Ralph Hill to testify before his committee sometime after January 1 on the matter.

The banks, Carpenter said, are allowed to use the money and as a result get interest off it. If more of the money was invested in bonds the state could realize
