Benton st., O'Neill, recently was graduated from navigator training at Hurlingham AFB, Tex., where he received his air force silver wings and commission as a second lieutenant. Lieutenant Strong attended O'Neill high school where he was graduated in May, 1952. The 42-week course he has completed has trained him for a place in the all-jet combat force of the air force. His mastering of the techniques of electronics and navigation qualifies him for an assignment as a navigator in the operational aircraft of the USAF. He has been assigned to Mather AFB, Calif., where he will receive advanced specialty training in radar bombardment and electronics.

Letters to Editor

Inman, Nebr.—The January 2 issue of The Frontier had a correspondent's letter stating that it was difficult for him to understand how making the commissioner of education an elective rather than an appointive office would improve the state's schools.

It would make the state education head directly responsible to the voters of the state. He would better serve if he thought he might lose his position at the next election.

The six-member state board of education should realize the unpopularity of some of the commissioner's objectives as shown in the legislature hearing on LB 444 last spring, but the board has failed to do anything about it. However, in an election, the voters could approve or disapprove the commissioner's policies.

Your correspondent also stated that the Nebraska School Improvement association members should spend time, money and efforts toward improving their own schools rather than clamoring for the office of the commissioner.

The schools were doing just that and appealing the state department as best they could until that department wanted to close some of the small schools.

They were interested in keeping their schools because of roads, distance to other schools, etc., thus the need for Nebraska School Improvement association to be formed.

One has but to read the aims and purposes of the association as written in the articles of incorporation, article 2, to know it is worthwhile and is for the good of our state school children.

No state senator would introduce the K-12 bill in our legislature last year. Some of them knew if they did their office might be at stake in the next election because many of the people don't want K-12.

I believe an elected office holder will serve his constituents more satisfactorily. My hope is that the voters will be able to vote for our state educational head, a policy proposed by the association.

LEWIS F. KOPECKY, JR. (Editor's note: Mr. Kopecky refers to a letter written by Supt. M. J. Baack of the O'Neill city schools.)
