By Dorothy M. Schrack

O'Neill residents who were fortunate enough to have Community Concert tickets, will remember February 8th, Sunday evening of 1959. Even though cold weather prevailed outdoors, a warm response was given the presentation of Carmen and Don Jose inside O'Neill's high school auditorium, as a near-capacity crowd clapped Ralph Nielsen and Rosemary Anoe and the accompanying string trio back for encore performance.

Here was a blend of personalities and voices as cozily matched as salt and pepper shaker sets and spiced with a trio who used their coordination to every music connoisseur's delight. This was their first concert of their tour in Nebraska. Their second and last performance in our great state played in Kearney Monday, February 9.

No strangers to the stage—these, Ralph Nielsen, who gave a stirring performance as Don Jose, is Chicago's distinguished tenor. He is a member of the Lyric Opera, has been heard on more than 800 solo radio and TV broadcasts, and his symphony appearances include 21 accompanied by the Chicago Symphony. He is musical director-producer of "Temple Time" broadcast, heard weekly on 70 stations in the USA and foreign countries. His solos included Rachmaninoff's "In The Silence of The Night" and "Old Mother Hubbard" for the "young in years and the young at heart." After the stabbing of Carmen, Ralph Nielsen's tenor voice was most convincing in "Lover

Come Back to Me" and if O'Neill has its way then the group can come back any time for a return engagement.

Rosemary Anoe's lovely voice mated ideally with Nielsen's. She studied at Chicago Musical college, lived in Harvey, Ill., a suburb of Chicago. She has sung with Grant Park Symphony, Duluth and Chicago Symphonies and in the New York City Center. Her outstanding personality captivated O'Neill's audience, who at first seemed wary, but after the second song, let its western hospitality show by demanding more songs than those listed on the program. Her speaking voice was pleasing, but what brought approving murmurs to the audience was her thrilling solo by Kern "With a Song in My Heart." After intermission, Rosemary Anoe was most convincing as a temperamental Carmen, who danced and sang her way into the hearts of O'Neill's concert ticket holders.

The Marlin String Trio capably assisted Mr. Nielsen and Miss Anoe as pure as rock-dashed water. The group as introduced included Lav Solvig, cellist from Cincinnati, O., and this city can be justly proud. She played an Italian cello made in the year 1667, and as Mr. Nielsen, who introduced the group put it: "She didn't purchase it herself." The fact that a hair or two broke on the bow for violinist Richard Hoffman, from River Forest, Ill., served to spur him to greater accomplishment as he performed most capably on an Italian
