Capitol News - Law Ideas Hatched During Off Season

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent

LINCOLN—This is the time of year in Nebraska when ideas leading to new laws are hatched.

Some of these crop up at hearings by committees of state senators who study state government within the state departments.

But they always turn up, usually being tossed about in the spring for a while, lay dormant generally during the summer then spring to life in the fall before the legislative session.

Here are a few of the ideas currently making the rounds in Nebraska's capital city, affecting state government:

The state should establish a five-year plan for mechanizing the processing of paperwork in the Capitol. A business machine consultant says this would save Nebraska $109,000 per year.

Thought should be given to regulating industry. This should include the butchering, shipping and storage of poultry used for human consumption. This idea has twice before failed in the Legislature.

Some control is needed on the procedure used in destroying records that have been microfilmed so as not to lose historically important documents. The state historical society says under the present setup conceivably valuable documents not screened by the society, could be destroyed.

There should be study given to unification of the state health and agricultural laboratories, thus fully utilizing expensive equipment.

Driving Permits.

The subject of drivers' licenses may well be on for some controversial debate in the 1961 Legislature.

That is, if there are any attempts to put a lid on the age of those who can drive without taking driving or health tests. This subject has recurred in other sessions of the Unicameral but bit the dust after being watered down by amendments.

The State Health Board is the latest to take a look at the matter. The board discussed the possibility of requiring medical examinations in order to obtain driving permits.

It was proposed the matter be taken up with the State Medical Association's House of Delegates and be discussed with the State Safety Patrol and the Motor Vehicle Department.

It has been argued in the past that someday there will need to be some type of regulation on who can drive. But those in the older categories have also argued that it is the teen-age group that causes the most accidents and restrictions should be there rather than on 65 years old and older drivers.

Radiation Control

A new subject has entered the field of public health in Nebraska—radiation control.

And the State Board of Health is looking toward establishment of rules on radiation control. This would include sources of radiation.

Doctors and dentists are the prime users of radio-active products now but soon the Consumers Public Power District nuclear plant at Hallam will be utilizing radioactive material.

Although the Atomic Energy Commission now has control over the Hallam project, State Health Board chairman, Dr. Maurice Frazer of Lincoln, hopes the time when this function will be turned over to the state and he wants to be ready for it.

Voter Registration

The chief election officer of the state, Secretary of State Frank Marsh, says a person need not be 21 to register to vote where it is required, but must be 21 by election day, May 10.

There has been some confusion on registering voters who will be 21 by May 10 but not until after the registration deadline passes. That deadline is April 29 for Omaha and Lincoln and April 30 at noon for cities from 7,000 to 40,000 population. Registration is not required elsewhere in the state.

Record Highway Letting

The State Highway Department opens bids May 12 on the largest construction letting in its history—$11,750,000.

The previous high was $9,500,000 in June, 1958.

The projects include six Interstate Highway projects between Omaha and Lincoln and will close the gap between those two cities.

This indicates that next year the bulk of the Interstate Highway projects probably will be further out-state—between Grand Island and Lexington where aerial photographs already have been taken of the north side of the Platte River.

Applications Asked

Communities interested in federal aid to help finance construction of sewage disposal units are asked by the State Water Pollution Control Council to submit their applications by June 30.

If federal funds are appropriated for fiscal 1961, up to 30 per cent of the cost of local projects approved will be paid by federal funds.

Gravel Maintenance

Some $24,000 in maintenance of gravel state highways is included in the May 12 highway construction letting. State Maintenance Engineer John McMeekin says that usual spring maintenance lettings are large ones because the department is replacing gravel lost because of a wet and heavy snow this winter.

The 30 re-graveling projects are estimated to take 80,445 cubic yards of gravel. A gravel truck, depending upon its size, hauls from five to 12 cubic yards, McMeekin said.
