However, there still are some areas of government where pay is not competitive with private industry. This is primarily in the skilled field.

A typical example is the highway department where pay raises went into effect June 1. Salary boosts of $50 per month for engineers and $25 per month for engineering aides were inaugurated.

Acting State Engineer John Hosack said it was apparent that with prevailing wages the department could not compete with private firms or even other highway departments for graduate engineers.

Hosack said the new pay scales, providing a salary of $475 for graduate engineers and $250 for engineering aides, puts the department in a better position to secure young engineers.

Legislative Council

Finishing touches are being put on reports of 15 committees of state senators. These reports will be aired in November at a meeting of the Legislative Council. The Council is composed of all members of the last Legislature who are divided into committees to study state problems.

They then submit reports for possible legislation to the new Legislature which convenes in January, 1961.

The Council was established by the Legislature in 1937. At that time it consisted of 16 senators, four from each Congressional district.

However, the 1949 Unicameral provided that all members be on the committee.

Operation is under an executive board with the chairman and vice chairman by the Legislature. In addition to preparing and distributing major research reports, the Council serves as a general service and information agency for the Legislature, its committees and individual members.

It also maintains a legislative reference library for the convenience of senators as well as providing a bill drafting service which becomes available to lawmakers 30 days before each session begins.

Legislators get no pay for serving on the Council except expenses of attending meetings.

Social Security

There apparently is a solution in the making on the problem of social security coverage for justices of the peace and constables in Nebraska.

Deputy Atty. Gen. Clarence Meyer has been working on the problem for some time. He says Sen. Carl Curtis of Nebraska has introduced a bill in Congress to deal with the situation.

Under the bill, fees to justices of the peace and constables would be reported as income from self-employment after this year.

The problem with the justices of the peace and constables has been that it is not clear whether they are state, county or city officers and so it could be determined which political subdivision was obligated to pay the employee's share of the social security tax.

Education

A periodic meeting of school superintendents with the State Board of Education has been proposed.

The suggestion was made by Frank Heinisch, board member from Omaha, who said "I don't think we have enough communication between this board and professional educators."

This is the second board type operation that has come up with proposals to get closer to the public.

Earlier, the Advisory State Highway Commission talked about a plan whereby it would consult with Nebraskans before developing the next two-year highway program.

Agricultural Research

The Nebraska Agricultural Products Research Fund Advisory Committee so far has undertaken projects affecting wheat, corn, milo and castor beans. But State Agriculture Director Pearl Finigan says this is only the beginning.

It may be that Nebraska's search for industrial uses for farm products may extend to all the principal commodities produced by Nebraska farmers, Finigan said.

He said since profitable results are never a certainty in research, Nebraska's tax financed program has been, and will continue to be, composed of many small projects in different areas.

Capitol News - Personnel Agree Statehouse Jobs Getting Better

By Melvin Paul
Statehouse Correspondent
The Nebraska Press Association

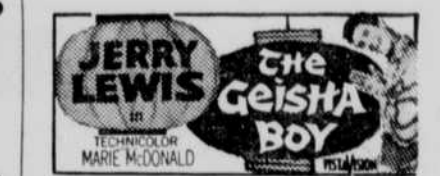

LINCOLN—State government is moving closer to a competitive position with private industry for employees. Not too many years back there was an extremely heavy turnover of personnel in the Capitol because of low pay and 44 hour, six-day work week. But, in recent years, lawmakers acted to overcome this problem.

They instituted the 40-hour five-day work week which now applies to virtually all areas of state gov-

By the calendar, Consumers Public Power District's Sheldon Station near Hallam, Nebraska, is now approximately half-way to completion.

In the past two years, the Station has been converted from a naked hillside to a complex of nearly completed buildings. Many pieces of equipment, including the 100,000 kilowatt turbo-generator, have been set in place.

In another two years, production of electric power from the nuclear heat source is scheduled to begin. In the meantime, in the spring of 1961, the plant's conventional steam facilities will already have gone on the line.

Completion of Sheldon Station will open a new era for Nebraska. The plant not only will supply a new source of needed electric power, but it will open great new potentials for economic growth.
