Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor, This letter comes to you from the Legislative Bill room in the State Capitol at Lincoln.

It may be of interest to some of you readers to know how the printed matter created by each session of the legislature is taken care of and distributed. The daily Legislative Journal contains the activities of the senators and is printed every morning. The legislative bills, which are introduced daily by the senators are also printed and both the journals and the bills are brought to the bill room for distribution.

In the bill room a complete file is kept up to date for each of the senators. There are also nearly 100 other persons who call daily for bills and each of these people are assigned pigeon holes where the days accumulation of bills is kept for them.

In addition to these each senator supplies lists of those in their districts who have requested copies of the bills or the journal. These are collected and mailed at the end of the week. Approximately 1,700 copies of each bill are printed and distributed each day along with an equal number of journals.

Although little mention is made of the legislative bill room, it serves a vital purpose and is one of the departments which makes it possible for the legislature to function effectively.

Sincerely, Jay Enness

Editor's Note A complete file of bills introduced in the present session of the legislature is kept at The Frontier office and any person interested in examining any of these bills is welcome to do so. The legislative journal, which is a record of the daily happenings in the present session, is also kept at The Frontier office and is available for public use.
