"A Carpet Price For Every Home"

This is the Challenge

When the Pilgrim fathers crossed the forbidding Atlantic and settled this great country that is America, they had sought the oft-quoted "American Dream" that is embodied in the words freedom and opportunity. But oppression from without forced the writing of that great document, The Declaration of Independence. And the government that came about found its basic structures in the still essential Bill of Rights and the Constitution.

Today that "American Dream" is being challenged... challenged by a way of life that could not and would not recognize our freedom and our opportunity. Communism would enslave all of us in its tentacles and blot out all vestige of that which we hold dear... that which our forefathers too held dear when they declared: "We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the Pursuit of Happiness."

We must re-examine our purposes as individuals and as members of this great Nation of ours. We must dedicate ourselves anew to those great principles that inspired men long ago to band together to preserve those truths they held to be self-evident. Therein lies our survival.

This is the Challenge.....
