Announce Rules On Price Support For Soybeans

Farmers are urged to avoid increasing soybean acreage at the expense of acreage now under conservation practices.

The requirement under the 1961 soybean price support program seeks to insure that any additional soybean production will be on acreage that has been used for crops in abundant supply rather than from land now in conserving uses or idle land.

Soybean producers will be required to maintain their 1959-60 average acreage of conserving any idle land on the farm in 1961 in order to be eligible for 1961 price support on their soybean crop.

Price support on the 1961 soybean crop has been increased to insure an adequate supply and to help meet anticipated needs for this important oil crop. The national average support price for 1961-crop soybeans will be $2.30 per bushel. The support for the 1960 crop of soybeans was $1.85 per bushel.

While the soybean price-support provision and the feed grain program both seek to encourage conservation and reduce the planting of crops which are in abundant supply, the soybean price support operates independently of the feed grain program.

Farmers may not plant soybeans on corn or grain sorghum acreage on which a diversion payment is earned under the 1961 feed grain program. Likewise, they may qualify for price support on their 1961 soybean crop by meeting the price-support conditions of eligibility and without participating in the 1961 feed grain program.
