Five State Officials Receive Pay Hike Effective Next Term

Payhikes have been given by the Legislature to four elected state officials and one appointive officer.

The lawmakers earlier had refused to boost the check of State Engineer John Hossack who now gets $13,500 per year. But they passed 22-14, only one vote over the minimum, a bill increasing by $1,000 per year salaries for the Secretary of State, Auditor, Treasurer and Attorney General. Beginning at the next term the Secretary of State will receive $9,000 per year as will the Auditor and Treasurer. The Attorney General will get $11,500.

The Adjutant General, who heads Nebraska's National Guard, got a pay boost of $3,400, from $6,600 to $10,000 per year. The general also gets a salary from the federal government.

Pay hikes cannot become effective for the elective officers during their current terms under a provision of the State Constitution.

Salaries are a continuing problem of state government and have been given careful consideration by the Legislature's Budget Committee. The committee's recommendations are expected to come to the floor in about two weeks. Some senators have expressed concern about the pay levels of the clerical and below-department head people in the departments and the discrepancies among the various divisions of government.

By law, elected officials get their pay set by the Legislature, with the exception of those departments that are run by boards, such as the State Board of Education. The earnings of employees in most cases, are fixed by heads of state departments.

Crackdown

Gov. Frank Morrison says if speed turns out to be the cause of traffic accidents on the Interstate Highway he will reduce the limits under the 75 miles per hour maximum.

The Legislature set the limit and the bill was signed by the governor. Morrison said he was a "little disappointed" in the Legislature's action. He added that if motorists comply with the speed limit that would be all right but studies have shown the average of drivers arrested on the Interstate has been 83 miles per hour.

The governor also called on Nebraskans May 30 and 31, during the Memorial Day period to drive with their lights on to call attention to other drivers of the necessity for caution in motoring.

Reception Center

A proposal to create a reception center through which newly sentenced prisoners could pass survived its first floor test by a substantial 36-4 vote.

The measure grew out of a Legislative study. The center would be at the men's reformatory in the present cell block. A new cell house is in planning stage. Sponsors say the center will enable prison and reformatory officials to find out what an inmate is like before he is thrown in with other prisoners and help to rehabilitate those who can best be helped.

The new dormitory is expected to cost $262,500 with funds coming from the Board of Control's share of the institutional building fund. The only other expenditure would be $20,000 per year for personnel for the center.

Hospital Askings

Fourteen Nebraska hospitals want $5.4 million in federal funds to help finance projects totaling $14 million for the 1962 fiscal year.

The State Health Department expects to get about $1.9 million in funds. Priorities will be set by the advisory council on hospitals May 29.

Pharmacy Bill

Much mail and telegrams have been received by State Senators over a bill they passed regarding pharmacy regulations. The proposal provides for the first time, the licensing of pharmacy businesses as such, with grounds established for revocation of licenses. Removed from present law and no longer permissible under the bill is a provision allowing any person to compound drugs if working under the supervision of a registered pharmacist.

Sponsors of the bill said this had been interpreted to mean supervision by mail or telephone, in extreme cases, and that the supervision should be immediate.

Under the new law, only licensed pharmacists or pharmacy interns will be allowed to compound drugs. Excepted are those persons who have owned and operated a pharmacy for 15 years. They may continue to do so if working under the direct and immediate supervision of a registered pharmacist.

Retirement

Five bills to extend retirement benefits to segments of state government were killed in committee. They would have provided for pension plans for employees of the game commission, highway department and municipal judges and extended benefits for teachers. The only proposal surviving committee action was one to permit Douglas and Lancaster counties to set up retirement programs for county employees.
