reduction in allotments in the new farm bill with caution. Wheat farmers have already taken a 30% reduction since 1951. Experience shows that allotment acres lost are rarely recovered.

The foreign aid program will be coming up soon for consideration on the floor of the House. Since 1956 this program has dispersed fund equal to one-third of our national debt, or $100 billion.

I am particularly critical of this program because experience has shown that you cannot buy friendship with American dollars. It has been admitted by the State Department that there is a great deal of graft and waste in this program. One of our main difficulties has been that we are reaching only the people at the top, and aid is not filtering down to those in need.

I am not in favor of any future commitments, for I feel this program should be eliminated. It is too much of a burden on the backs of the American taxpayers.

Report from Washington
By Congressman Dave Martin Fourth District, Nebraska

The House for some weeks has been marking time until committee action is completed on three of the President's major pieces of legislation. These are foreign economic aid; medical aid, which would be tied in with Social Security; and the agricultural program.

The three Federal aid to education bills were killed on July 18th by the Rules Committee. The Leadership of the House directs the activities of the Congress, and we have not been too active during the past few weeks. If these bills were brought to the floor of the House promptly, we could adjourn this Session in a matter of two weeks; but it looks as if we will be here until September.

It is only about 30 days until wheat planting begins in the high plains area, and the farmers do not yet know what their allotments will be next year. As this is being written, the House Agriculture Committee is completing its work on the farm bill for next year, which includes wheat.

The wheat situation is in quite a different status than was the corn and feed grains program. In the case of feed grains, it was a matter of a new program or no program at all, as there had been limitations on production. In the case of wheat, there is an existing program; and unless Congress takes action to replace it, the present program will be in effect for the 1962 crop.
