A Poem

From Mrs. Eby . . .

—A Little Raindrop—
Why should I be lost and buried in the dirty ground?
Why should I disappear in dark old mud be found?
When I might glisten like diamond in rainbow's arch,
Why should I fall to the ground and parch,
Yes, the great genius in love agreed,
But in the rainbow's arch there is no need,
But if you fall on the earth your beauty shows,
You'll come forth in the lovely petals of the rose,
Or in the hanging cluster of the purple vine,
That refreshes the traveler as he walks down the line.
So, at last the rain drop with tears of regret,
Dropped out of the cloud and by dry ground was met,
It was gone out of sight, seemingly out of existence,
But lo! The foot of yon lily drinks without resistance,
Then far reaching rootlets from yonder vine,
Drank the much needed moisture and thanked the Divine,
Soon the purple grapes springs up into sight,
And meet the great genius of the air with delight.
Yes, the little raindrop died but it lives again
In the larger life in the hearts of men,
So the wild wind strews its perfumed caresses,
Evil and thankless the desert it blesses,
Never it ceases to whisper and sing, what if the hard heart gives thorns for the roses,
What if one rocks they tired bosom reposes,
Sweeter is music with minor-keyed closes,
So a life unselfishly invested in others,
Friction will see in needy brothers.
Della Stuart Eby
