When the deer visited the school last year it was quite an event for the youngsters as she walked inside and was not at all frightened. The animals wasn't as friendly this time and wouldn't go inside the building. However, she permitted Miss Lewis and her pupils to pet her and licked salt from their hands. Hay was placed inside the entranceway to tempt the doe inside but she only reached in, nibbled at the hay and backed out.

Still noticeable on either side of the doe was a coat of blue and paint which evidently was applied by someone during the hunting season as a warning to sportsmen. Miss Lewis, whose home is in Kansas, had never seen a deer before.
