Nebraska 4-H Youths Prove Value of Projects

Week in Chicago Is Filled With Fun and Surprises

Thirty-one Nebraska 4-Hers recently spent five exciting days at the 40th National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago. They enjoyed sightseeing tours, parties, meetings and gazed at elaborate Christmas decorations along State Street.

Jim Jorgensen, 17, of Ames; Connie Kettelhut, 16, of Walton; Lionel Swanson, 18, of Stromsburg, and Helen Mathers, 17, of Butte, represented the Cornhusker State in the automotive, health, dairy and canning programs.

One of the highlights of the congress this year was the "pop" concert at Orchestra Hall, featuring Arthur Fiedler as guest conductor, two 4-H soloists, and the Chicago Symphony orchestra. The Honorable Brooks Hays, Assistant Secretary of State, discussed foreign policy, and Danny Thomas appeared as a special guest for the Sunday assembly.

Jorgensen began attending 4-H meetings eight years ago, before he was old enough to fill out an application. He has actively participated in many 4-H projects, but regards automotive as his favorite. It features the safe operation and maintenance of motor vehicles.

Although this program supported by the Firestone Tire & Rubber Company is comparatively new, the firm has supported 4-H for 18 years.

Miss Kettelhut probably represents one of the most health-conscious families in the history of 4-H. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carrol Kettelhut, an aunt and an uncle have all been county or state 4-H health champions. Miss Kettelhut's sister achieved national fame in this program a few years ago.

In an effort to make people civil defense-conscious, Miss Kettelhut participated in the nation's first teenage survival test. Accompanied by three other girls, she proved she could survive in a cave-shelter for 34 hours. An old-fashioned forge was used to control air circulation and sacks of corn cobs served to ward off radiation.

For the past several years, county and state recognition has been bestowed upon the Busy Bees, a 4-H Health Club of which Miss Kettelhut is president. She attended club congress as the guest of Eli Lilly and Company.

Young Swanson purchased his first dairy animal from his father 10 years ago. Today he is financing his education at the University of Nebraska with the aid of his herd of 13, and his dairy profits of more than $5,000. For two consecutive years,

Swanson exhibited the top junior herd of all breeds at the county fair. His production records won all-expense trips to the National Dairy Congress at Waterloo, Ia., for himself and his club leader.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Swanson, his trip was made possible by the Oliver Corporation, which supports the national 4-H dairy program.

Helen Mathers

The oldest in a family of 10 children, Helen Mathers has made practical use of her canning projects and estimates a savings of more than $250.

She recalls her first experience with the cold pack method and says her brothers still tease about the "half pints" of apricots which resulted. Since then, Miss Mathers has become an expert in preserving a large variety of foods. She canned almost 300 quarts this year.

Miss Mathers has received the Ak-Sar-Ben special award for the top exhibitor for five consecutive years. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emery Mathers.

Almost 150,000 girls are enrolled in the 4-H canning program which the Kerr Glass Manufacturing Corporation has sponsored for 33 years.
