A Poem
From Mrs. Eby ...

—VISION—
I believe in America. She means something special and different from other nations. Often we forget what she means. We let ourselves think she means money, lands, machinery, merchandise and manpower and we think we have the world by the tail because we have an abundance of such assets. But that's childish thinking. Other nations have had equal treasure and yet have gone down. If wealth is all that America means, then America will end like all the others. But America does mean more than wealth, land and manpower. She was based on a vision — a vision of freedom and equality with each man given a sacred right and chance to make the most of himself. Of course, we haven't achieved that vision yet. We're still unfair, unkind and stupid but we are on our way.
I believe in America because she has that vision and it's in her heart, as well as in her books. Yes I know — she bluffs and pretends, acts smartly, and looks and passes the buck. But in spite of that there's something fine in America: Something that all the spies and slackness, crooks, cowards, powers and parasites can never black out. I believe in America! I believe in her future! She's been in plenty of jams before but she has always won through for you can't kill a vision.
Money may fail you — lands may fail you. But that vision will always win. Bank on that, neighbor. Bank on the dream that led to "Plymouth Rock" — started the covered wagon cavalcade, bank on that. Breezy instant vision we've held to, of freedom and fair play. Pray for it, fight for it, sacrifice your last breath for it. "America will win through."
(Elsie Robinson)
