Amelia News

By Miss Florence Lindsey

March came in like a lion and has been roaring ever since. His breath has been a mighty chilly one. We have about 20 inches of snow. The weather conditions have made it hard for the cattlemen, and anyone else who has to be outside. Roads have been blocked and the snow plows have been working hard to keep traffic moving, but it has been almost impossible with the shifting winds. We're so glad it's March instead of November.

Guy Blake re-entered St. Anthony's hospital Saturday afternoon for a few days. He did not have another heart attack, but due to the weather thought it best to be near the doctor.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Hansen and family are new residents on the late Ed White place. Mr. Hansen is employed by Glenn White. Mrs. Hansen is a relative to Glenn, her mother being the former Wilma Moss.

There were no services at either of the Amelia churches Sunday due to the snow storm.

Capitol News-

Cattle Brands Nearly 1,000 cattle brands were not renewed by the deadline, Secretary of State Frank Marshall reported.

Marsh said owners of 18,000 brands, whose last names began with L through Z, should have renewed their brands with the usual $2 fee. But, he said, only 17,000 were renewed.

The cattlemen were given two notices by Marsh's office that the brands were due. He said those who failed to re-register their brands and who live in the cattle brand area and want to sell their livestock may find difficulty in proving ownership of them.

A new procedure for outlining spending intentions of state governmental agencies has been developed after months of work. The idea was controversially advanced in the 1961 session of the Legislature by Sen. Richard Marvel of Hastings, chairman of the budget committee.

It is the powerful budget committee that recommends to the Legislature how much the various state departments should be allowed to spend during a two-year period.

While it is true the committee's recommendations can be, and have been, altered by floor action, they generally become law through approval of the Legislature.

Marvel's idea was called functional budgeting. At the time, he explained this meant that agencies, through functional budgeting, would better be able to explain to the committee:

1. The activities of the particular department involved. 2. How much money each function — or activity — would cost. In the past the general grouping of requests for money concerned categories such as salaries, maintenance, etc.

These will be kept under the new budgeting idea but departments additionally will outline their proposals and costs by activities.

Also new in the fiscal field when the 1963 session convenes will be a fiscal analyst, John Quigley, whose job will be to provide facts and analysis to the lawmakers.

Young Workers An attempt will be made by the State Labor Department to halt the outflow from Nebraska of young workers between 16 and 21 years old.

State Labor Commissioner Donald Bastemeyer says Nebraska expects to turn out 19,000 high school graduates this year and predicts that within five years the total would double.

Gov. Frank Morrison said Nebraska's effort stems from President Kennedy's concern for young people being thrown into the labor market. Bastemeyer said youth employment representatives are being appointed at the state level and for each of the 15 employment offices throughout Nebraska.

In Nebraska only 28 per cent of the high school graduates continue their education. Nationally, the figure is 44 per cent. Morrison directed his committee on Children and Youth to attempt to find out the reason why graduates do not continue their education.

Interstate Nebraska plans to take bids on seven interstate highway projects worth nearly $5 million during the first three months of this year, the highway department says.

Contracts also will be let on 13 primary road system projects for $3.1 million and 19 secondary projects for $4.1 million for a total of $12.3 million, including interstate work.

By the end of the current quarter, State Engineer John Hossack said, the state will have $106.4 million in Interstate work under agreement.

Reimers Retires Otto Reimers has retired after 14 years of working with Nebraska's motor vehicle laws.

The retirement was announced by Jerry Eiting, director of the State Department of Motor Vehicles, who said William Edwards would replace Reimers.

Reimers plans to travel and then settle in either Boone or Antelope county.

Cozad School Kansas educational officials were pleased with Nebraska's school for the trainable retarded child at Cozad. A group of educators from Nebraska's sister state toured the residential institution which handles now about 30 youngsters.

The Cozad school was established by the Legislature and operated by the Board of Control beginning in 1958. It was transferred to the State Department of Education.
