A Poem From Mrs. Eby . . .

What is Easter? I ask a sweet little Miss, when ready for church she ran in for a kiss, "What is Easter?" my child? If you know, tell me pray. Why course, Uncle Jack, Why Easter's the day that we all go to church in our pretty new clothes — new dresses and hats with flowers and bows.

What is Easter? I ask a bright little boy, when he came to show me some new Easter toy. What is Easter, my boy? If you know, tell me pray, Why course, Uncle Jack, Why Easter's the day that we eat all the eggs we can possibly hold, all colored and fixed up with red, blue and gold.

I smiled, but, my friends, in my heart there was pain. That Easter should ever have meaning so vain. That riches and fashion and love of display should sometimes seem draining the true meaning away.

That Easter, a word which with sweetness o'er flows, should mean to some nothing, save feasting and clothes.

In a hospital ward, on a little white bed, lay a small stricken news boy and close by his head lay a sweet Easter lily, which he showed with such joy and bade me "Just smell".

What is Easter my boy? Why Easter dear doctor, Why Easter's the day that Jesus arose from the grave where He lay.

The angels they came and they rolled way the stone and He went up to heaven, cause you know that's His home.

Such a nice lady told me about it you see, and how He'll be watching in Heaven for me, and nobody's 'fraid now, since that Easter day, cause Jesus has risen and He'll show the way.
