

Prairieland Talk

"Springtime Again"

By ROMANE SAUNDERS, 411 South 51st St., Lincoln 6, Nebr.

Dr. A. H. Corbet was the first dentist to start the job of pulling aching teeth here in O'Neill. Corbet started life in Holt county on a homestead three miles east of the northeast limits of O'Neill, later came to town and established his home on what is now First street at its southern limits, had a dental office on East Douglas street and also took pictures of citizens. I have said Dr. Corbet was the first dentist to come to O'Neill, but my revered dad was the first though he did not open a dental office as he was an outdoor man and settled on a homestead just to the northeast of Corbet's prairie home. Both had come from Pennsylvania to the then wild west of north Nebraska and both today rest under the sod in the abode of the dead on Prospect Hill.

As a girl Nellie Cronin was helping a bit in her brother-in-law's little print shop in the basement of the O'Neill National Bank building. Nellie was a sister of Dan and Will Cronin of pioneer days. Nellie became the wife of Den Hunt, they for some time remaining in O'Neill, then went to Lincoln to make their home. Three years ago Mr. Hunt died, his widow and their son and his family living together in our Capital City. I recently had a telephone visit with Nellie. She has not been well all winter and could talk but little, expressing herself that the end is near for her too. Yes, we may survive for many years to help some traveler along life's way, but some day the Death Angel closes our eyes to open no more until the Resurrection Morning. Are we ready for it?

So down at Grand Island they want you to go to Sunday school and church or set at home sucking your thumb and doing nothing. A Sunday closing of business places being promoted in many communities.

Winter winds and drifting snows gone again. Out across prairielands miles of landscape a robe of velvet green and a spot of drifting sand at long intervals. The blooming prairie rose and dainty blue bits of floral beauty; birds flying from fence post to fence post; the buzz of insects and hum of bees. Stately trees clothed in green and apple blossom time on the way; cattle feeding again on pastures green and farmer boys at it once more in their fields. . . . Snow and cold hit us hard another winter and now the time of summer sunshine and happy growing days as we travel life's highway.

Mullen Brothers, two of them bearing that name, served the community in the livery and feed barn business at the old Ward barn on East Douglas street in the days of the horse and buggy, horses and wagons with wide tires, bucking broncos and double cinch saddles. Later as livery business declined and rubber tired rigs with a steering wheel took over and the Mullens quit the "horse and buggy" business, as did the other four or five livery stables. Now it is "filling stations" on many corners. What next to get you on your way to the journey's end?

My printer friend here in Lincoln, Mr. Rocky and his wife entertained friends from Ewing recently. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmerman. They visited in Lincoln for a few days before returning home. And now Printer Rocky tells me they will soon be in Ewing for a short stop on their way to Wyoming for a visit.

He had made a fortune in the Synagogues of Satan, but lays lifeless straightened for the grave. "What shall it profit a man if he gains much wealth but loses his own soul?"

The sun glows in all its golden glory out of the bright blue sky this April day. Snow banks gone and ice along the way now no more. Capital City citizens are well behaved for the most part and house wives here and there are out putting things in order about their homes as blooming morning glory time comes again. But Prairieland Talker is still within his four walls with a lame left leg that permits no walking along city streets. No wind today, calm and serene without and peaceful all within.

It has been many months since I had word from my good friend the Postmaster in Atkinson and I wonder if he now has that new post office building that was to rear its architectural beauty in the old cow town of north Nebraska. Chunks of roast beef come from up there and city dwellers down this way are well fed. And my good friend and cousin George Meals has not picked up his pen or pencil for some time to write to me of life with him and his dear ones a few miles out from Atkinson. And I had hoped maybe Editor Kelly—is that his name—might at times send this old Holt county printer a copy of the Graphic. Trust all is going well in the Atkinson community.

I trust Walter O'Malley survived the months of snow and ice and had no frost bitten toes. Maybe a cheering word will come from that hardy Irish pioneer now most any day. Hi, Walt.

The Budget Myths

By Dr. Harley L. Lutz
Professor Emeritus, Public Finance
Princeton University

For the average person the federal budget is a closed book. When he reads that the government will spend $92.5 billion in fiscal year 1963 it leaves him not only cold, but numb. No one can grasp the real meaning of one billion dollars, to say nothing of 90-odd billion.

Let's deal with some of the unfounded reasons that have been given in support of the present immense total of our money that Uncle Sam plans to spend. Let's call them budget myths.

MYTH 1. The budget rise has been caused by national defense spending.

Since 1955, spending for major national security has risen by $12 billion while nondefense spending has gone up by $16 billion in the same time.

MYTH 2. We can afford it.

From 1955 through 1963 the government will have spent $25 billion more than was collected in revenues. No family, and no business, could afford to operate that way.

MYTH 3. The people have demanded more spending.

The popular demand for spending has never been tested, let alone proved, in a straight-out question to the people.

MYTH 4. There is urgent need for more federal spending.

It is pure myth that the Federal government has an obligation to pay for public improvements or even to help pay for them. The government has no money except what it takes from the people.

MYTH 5. Government spending promotes economic growth.

This is the grand-daddy of all myths and fallacies about government spending. When government takes more private income—that is, when tax collections are increased—the people spend less and government spends more.

ALTAMONT, N. Y., ENTERPRISE: "Campaign promises are the same everywhere—bigger benefits, more services, something for everyone—and all for nothing. Costs are ignored. The public rarely is reminded that if these promises are fulfilled there will be higher taxes. Those seeking public office should show the price tag that accompanies each of their promises. Governments are, in a sense, consumers' cooperatives—they act as the purchasing agent for the public. Many persons fail to realize that when they elect a candidate pledged to increase government spending, they are in effect voting for higher taxes."

ONTARIO-UPLAND, CALIF., DAILY REPORT: "As Tokyo's famed 'Japan Times' expressed it recently: 'The power of Japan's women has grown tremendously since they were given the suffrage shortly after the war.' A great change has taken place in the picture most U.S. citizens have had of the traditional Japanese housewife as an excessively modest, retiring person who was almost a mere household servant. Japanese women have discovered a propensity for organizing. Now Japanese politicians have suddenly realized they must recognize a new political force in Japan, the Shufuren, or Federation of Housewives Association."
