The stone you might have lifted out of your brother's way, the bit of heartsome counsel you were hurried too much to say, the loving touch of the hand, dear, the gentle and winsome tone that you had no time or thought for, with troubles enough of your own.

These little acts of kindness, so easily out of mind. These chances to be angels which even mortals find. They come in the night and silence each chill reproachful wrath when hope is faint and a blight has dropped on faith.

For life is all too short, dear, and sorrow is all too great to suffer our slow compassion that carries until too late, and it's not the things you do, dear, it's the things you leave undone, which gives you a bitter heartache at the setting of the sun. (Adele Proctor)

A Poem From Mrs. Eby . . . An Old Quaker Saying It isn't the things you do, dear, it's the things you leave undone, which gives you the bitter heartache, the letter you did not write, the flower you might have sent, dear, are your haunting ghosts at night.
