A Poem From Mrs. Eby . . .

—HAPPY JIM—

The Pastor, a puzzled frown on his face, hurried to the caretakers humble place. I'm worried, everyday I see an old man, at twelve o'clock as though it's his plan, go into the church, stay a minute and come out. I wish you would watch this character, to root, the altar furnishings are valuable you know. He might take some, then outward go.

Then the caretaker watched and asked the old man to say, what are you doing in the church every day. I go to pray, the old man's quiet word. Now come! You don't stay long enough for prayers to be heard. Yes, I can't make long prayers. I just come and say, "Jesus it's Jim" and I think he hears me every day.

Old Jim was ran over, taken to a hospital ward. That ward had been hard for nurses and guard. Some men cross and miserable they didn't improve. Just grumble from morning all day in a groove, then slowly the atmosphere underwent a change, the men seemed happier as if it was arranged.

The men were laughing and chaffing so fair. The nurses looked at Jim with silvery hair. Always happy though suffering she knew. You see nurse, at twelve my visitor comes through and stands at the foot of my bed to pray. I see Him there with this little prayer each day " Jim it's Jesus."
