

A Poem
From Mrs. Eby ...

In Memoriam for O. B. Stuart
I had a brother the last one I had, so you'll see why my heart is so sad, when the Lord said "come home". Though we can't understand when we thought he was needed so much in our land.
Since with him we've traveled so many years, we can't help shedding some bitter tears. But we've always found God's way is best through, with our short vision it's hard we confess.
But somehow we know if we understand why he was called when his life was so good, and this old world needs good men we know, as on through life we continue to go, always ready to help in times of need and little children by the hand to lead.
And his quiver was full, six children and grandchildren too, who will mourn for him their whole lives through and one lonely old sister eighty years old, who remembers him with his heart of gold.
And Olga, his true blue wife, who stood by him all through his life, inspiring and boosting him all the way. Though at times the way looked rugged she just kept gay, smiling right through as a good wife should do, cheering him on all his life through.
But all we can say "God's will, not ours" and his friends were legion, as shown by the flowers, banking the church from each side we know, helping in their sweet way to soften the blow.
Della Stuart Eby
