Why Best of All Days Cooking School Here?

Everybody in O'Neill knows there is a cooking school coming to town. It's called Best of All Days, since it is built around the central theme that today, right now, is the best of all day in O'Neill.

Cooking schools, like stage shows, always arouse curiosity among residents of the community in which the school is to be held.

How did these cooking schools get started? Where do they originate? How did this newspaper get wind of them and how did it come to sponsor one? What's the story behind the story on Best of All Days? Best of All Days was dreamed up during brain storming sessions held by the staff of Farm and Home Section magazine. Three years ago the idea was presented to a group of national food product producers.

It did not take long before all parties concerned realized that Best of All Days was hot and could not be held back. Here was an event tailored directly to and for the homemakers of rural America.

Two years ago the Best of All Days cooking operation was put on the road covering nine states — Minnesota, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Ohio, North Dakota, Wisconsin, Iowa and South Dakota.

This year the schools will make the rounds of those nine states again plus one additional — Nebraska.

Each year 100 Best of All Days cooking schools are put on. Usually the schedule works out so that 50 of the schools are scheduled for the Fall — September, October and the first two weeks of November — and the remaining 50 schools are slated for the Spring — January, February, March, April and sometimes into May.

Through experience Rural Gravure learned that homemakers are simply too busy to be out attending cooking schools during the summer months or around the Christmas holidays. So no schools are put on during the months of June, July or August or the latter part of November, part of December and the first part of January.

The schools are always newspaper-sponsored in cooperation with the national sponsors which this year include Brer Rabbit Molasses, Red Star Yeast, Van Camp's Pork and Beans, Alcoa Wrap, Pillsbury Flour and the Nestle Company. Organizer and actual parent of the Best of All Days run of cooking schools is Rural Gravure Publications with two of its newspaper magazine sections: Farm and Home Section and DAKOTA Magazine.

Only those newspapers which regularly include either Farm and Home Section, or in the Dakotas Dakota magazine, may sponsor a Best of All Day cooking school. The Best of All Days run of cooking schools is held in O'Neill on Thursday, Oct. 25 at 1 p.m. in the Legion hall will be attending will be typical of all the other hundreds of schools put on since the program was started.

The usual free cookbooks will be given to every woman attending, the usual large bags of groceries will be given away along with the many other prizes and everything the home economist bakes will also be handed out. No admission is charged and the attendance at almost every Best of All Days cooking school has been tremendous. Last year's schools averaged over 600 homemakers per school with the total attendance reaching well over 60,000.

She will demonstrate the latest techniques in food preparation and pass on to the homemakers present recipes collected by Rural Gravure and considered by the Farm and Home Section and Dakota Magazine home economists as the best available.
