Another new year lies before us, this column is being written once more with a heavy heart. Sadness has visited many homes in this small community in the past few days. An old and loved friend, John McDaniel, passed away New Year's day. He had spent many hours in suffering and pain, and there seemed to be nothing mortal hands could do, only a greater power is able to bring that look of peace and divine content. January 2 my beloved brother, Howard Luben left us suddenly at his home. Howard had been in ill health since 1947 and had been in and out of hospitals many times, but was able to be about a great deal, although pain was with him almost constantly. My younger brother left us very suddenly and without warning the morning of Aug. 18, and from this blow Howard never fully recovered or accepted. These lines are being written from a treasured solid walnut desk that Howard made for me in March of last year. It is large, polished highly, has spacious drawers and file drawers, perfect in every detail. The brass trimming is not only on the handles but tips the legs as well. Our mother died many years ago and our family has been exceptionally close since. As a child well do I treasure the memories, when pennies were scarce and as a little girl I would gaze at a doll, one in particular, a large one that I longed for, yes, Christmas morning, not only the doll but my sister and I found a lovely little dresser, huge mirror and all, and Santa Claus was spelled Howard. A phone I longed for, yes, it appeared too, not then, did I know the sacrifice and love, only now these things crowd in, wonderful memories, of brothers, whose hands and hearts worked in unison so that others were made happy. They were wonderful brothers as are yours, and I ask your forgiveness in taking this space this week. Next week, God willing, we hope to be back with news and may it be the better kind. May your coming year be blessed and joyous.
