WESSEL & DOBBINS, Prop'rs.

Of all unprecedented winters the winter that is at present with us is simply unprecedented.

A CHICAGO girl has married a full-blooded Sioux Indian. A large number of fools are still abroad.

The COURIER would again call the attention of the Democrat to the fact that it owes an apology to Mr. Burns for its unwarranted interference with his work on the city wells and the delay it caused both the contractor and city.

The Free Press in its last issue gives a very entertaining sketch of Lincoln, together with a roster of its city officers from incorporation to date. The subject matter, we have no doubt, is very interesting, but so far the names are all we can decipher.

The appointment of Mr. Thomas L. Kimball to be general manager of the Union Pacific system gives general satisfaction. Mr. Kimball has been with the road for years, and standing close to the late T. J. Potter, is conversant with all his plans, and has the executive ability to carry them to a successful ending.

An exchange curtly remarks: A girl's taste differs according to her age. At sixteen she wants a dude with tooth-pick shoes and microscope mustache; at twenty a chief justice with plenty of cash; at twenty-five she would be satisfied with a member of congress; at thirty a doctor or preacher; at thirty-five anything that wears pants, from an editor up.

The teachers of the state have been enjoying themselves at Fremont this week, where the state convention was held. The discussions covered a wide range of educational subjects, and must prove of incalculable benefit to the profession of the entire state. Specimens of school work from the various cities of Nebraska were an exhibition, and afforded much gratification by the excellent showing made.

It is rumored that the New Republic will be converted into a daily on or about the 1st of June. The projectors have endeavored to purchase the Evening News, but the proprietors of that paper were not anxious to sell. We suggest to the gentlemen who are about to embark in this enterprise that they kind of even things up a little by making it a morning instead of an afternoon sheet. Besides, by backing the Journal instead of the evening papers it will lose as much money and gain more experience.

We regret to see the News take the stand that it is necessary for the welfare of the city that republicans should be elected to the various municipal offices. Partisanship has no business in a city election. The best man should be elected without regard to his politics. A good man of any party is a thousand times better fitted to fill an office than a bad man of any other party. The COURIER, as we have before stated, takes little interest in politics and political parties, but it earnestly desires to see clean government, and the man who panders to the vicious element should be defeated every time. Our advice to all voters is to cast your ballot for the best man, be he republican, democrat or prohibitionist.

A BROOKLYN congressman, Deacon White of Wall street fame, has become disgusted with the tedious workings of congress and has declined another nomination. He says he is too old a man to wait for congress to reach any bill he might introduce, and will step out for some younger man. Mr. White is about right. Congress of late years has become a refuge for political bosses, whipper-snapper politicians and men with more money and "gall" than brains, who have no adequate conception of their duties. Take such men as Holman and Bland, men who have done more to clog the wheels of legislation than any ten men who have disgraced the halls of the capitol at Washington. The truth of the matter is that the lower house contains too many members. If cut down to about half its present number some good might be done. At present it is nothing more than a big, unwieldy body, capable of accomplishing something but it never does.

It is really amusing to notice how many editors get to using the phrases, "the people will not stand this thing much longer," "the people call a halt right here," etc., until the inflated creatures imagine they are "the people" in reality. It is very nauseating to the reading public to listen to the vapors of these men who set themselves up as the voice of the people when the facts of the case are, that it is nothing but the prejudices and opinions of one man who has set himself up as a censor. This fact has become so thoroughly understood that the editorial page is a mere power it was in the earlier days of a free press. The newspaper reader of today prefers to read the facts and form his own opinions therefrom, and in the majority of cases, if he is a constant reader, those opinions are as liable to be as correct as those of the editor.

THE COURIER would again impress it upon the minds of the people of Lincoln that Mr. H. J. Whitmore should be re-elected to the police judgeship, not because he is a democrat but because he is better fitted for the place than any aspirant likely to receive the republican nomination. Mr. Edly would make a good executive officer, but his chances are not very good. No one can dispute but that Mr. Whitmore's wise administration has purified the moral atmosphere of the city, and when we have a good man in the right place, we see no reason why he should not be continued. His course is commended by all good citizens, and we believe he will be continued in office.

LINCOLN has a society lady who asserts her ability of knowing everything a lady has on from boots to hat with five minutes' acquaintance, and the precise cost of each article.

WE have looked through the Practical Home Physician with much satisfaction. It is written in an easy and familiar style. We take great pleasure in saying that we regard it as possessing claims to a place in the homes of the people that no other work within our knowledge, on popular medicine, has been found worthy to occupy. The names of the editors furnish a guarantee to the people of its legitimacy, and its close, concise and accurate history of the diseases recorded, and instructions in plain saxon, as to the use of remedies, will commend it to the common sense of a scientific, practical work, adapted to the needs of the people, on the subjects treated, are of a high order, and we will take great pleasure in recommending it as a household friend to any family, and as a volume full of good, practical and wholesome advice. Our readers will have the opportunity in the coming month to obtain this wonderful work by subscription of Mr. Cobb, the general agent, at 342 south Eleventh street, or from his solicitors who will call on you.

WAS IT THE HEN OR THE HARE?

A curious custom prevails in Germany, for which there appears no explanation. Hares are in the popular belief of the children, transformed for the nonce into oviparous animals, and you see in the pastry cooks' win ova animals of that species as large as life, modeled in sugar, and sitting upright in a nest, surrounded by any quantity of eggs. The fresh, simple minded German children believe implicitly in this egg producing power of the hare; and when, about Easter time, they see one running across a field, they clap their hands and shout after it: "Hare, good little hare, lay plenty of eggs for us on Easter day!" Implicit belief in the hare as the author of Easter eggs does not exist among the young people of all countries, however. The little maiden depicted in the illustration here given is evidently in doubt on which to pin her faith, the fluffy hen or the floating hare.

THE PERPLEXED DREAMER.

It is the custom in German families on Easter eve to place sugar and real eggs (the former usually filled with bonbons or tiny playthings) in a nest, and then conceal it in the house or garden, in order that the young ones, who always rise at break of day on that important morning, may have the delight of seeking and finding the hidden treasures. Happy the little ones who are thus taught to associate joy and pleasure with the deepest mysteries of that religion which among us too often made the harbinger of gloom and restraint.

THE RESURRECTION FLOWER.

Stories That Are Told of This Natural Wonder.

Travelers in Egypt, who profess to have seen the genuine resurrection flower, describe it as a little ball hanging on its fragile stem, and resembling both in color and shape a shrunken poppy head. Sleeping, but not dead, the flower is aroused by being for an instant immersed in water and then supported in an upright position. Soon the upper fibers begin to stir. Slowly, yet visibly, they unfold, until, with petals thrown back in equidistant order, it assumes the appearance of a beautifully radiated, starry flower, not unlike some of the asters in form. Resting a moment, it suddenly, as though inspired by some new impulse, throws its very heart to the daylight, curving back its petals farther still and disclosing beauties undreamed of even in the loveliness of its first awakening.

To say that, in general effect, its appearance resembles the passion flower, is to give but a poor description, and yet one searches in vain for a more fitting comparison. Lacking entirely the strong contrasts in color of the latter, it yet wears a halo of its own, unlike any other in the whole range of floral effects.

When viewed through a powerful lens, one traveler claims the heart of the flower, which, to the naked eye, lies flooded in a warm, colorless light, assumes the most exquisite iridescent hues, far more beautiful than the defined tints of the passion flower. Melting to the eye in its juiciness and delicacy, yet firm in its pure outline and rounded finish, it bears the same relation to that chosen type of the great Suffering, that peace bears to passion, or that promise bears to prayer.

Soon the aspect of the flower changes. As though over the well spring of its eternal life hangs some ruthless power forcing it back into darkness, before an hour has passed, we can see that its newly found vigor is fading away. The pulsing light at its heart grows fainter and fainter; slowly the petals raise themselves, to drop wearily side by side upon its bosom—and finally, its beauty vanished, its strength exhausted, it hangs heavy and brown upon its stem, waiting for the touch that alone can waken it again.

This rare botanical wonder, blooming one moment before admiring eyes, and next lying dried and shriveled, is not without its legendary interest, though the odor of its oriental history has, by this time, been nearly blown away by that sharp atmosphere of investigation, which has already whirled so many pretty fables and theories into oblivion.

The story of the resurrection flower, as given in 1856 by the late Dr. Deck, the naturalist, is as follows:

While traveling on a professional tour in Upper Egypt, eight years before, engaged in exploring for some lost emerald and copper mines, he chanced to render medical service to an Arab attached to his party. In gratitude the child of the desert formally presented to him this now called "Resurrection Flower," at the same time enjoining him never to part with it. Like the fabled gift of the Egyptian, it was supposed to have "magic in the web of it." The doctor was solemnly assured by the Arab and others of his race that it had been taken ten years before from the breast of an Egyptian mummy, a high priestess, and was deemed a great rarity; that it would never decay if properly cared for; that its possession through life would tend to revive hope in adversity, and, if buried with its owner, would insure for him hereafter all the enjoyments of the Seventh Heaven of Mohammed. When presented, this flower was one of two hanging upon the same stem. Dr. Deck carefully preserved one. The twin specimen he presented to Baron Humboldt, who acknowledged it to be the greatest floral wonder yet seen and the only one he had met with in the course of his extensive travels.

For years the doctor carried his treasure with him everywhere, prizing it for its intrinsic qualities and invariably awakening the deepest interest whenever he chanced to display its wondrous powers. During the remainder of his life, it is claimed, he caused the flower to open many times, without causing any diminution of its marvelous property or any injury whatever to it.

Eggs as a Tribute to the King.

Formerly at the approach of Easter all the hen roosts of France were ransacked for the largest eggs, which were brought as a tribute to the king. At the conclusion of the Easter high mass in the chapel of the Louvre lockets brought into the royal cabinet pyramids of gilded eggs, placed in baskets adorned with verdure; and the chaplain, after having blessed them, distributed them in the presence of his most Christian majesty to all the persons about the court.

THE CAUSE OF RHEUMATISM.

It is claimed that rheumatism is sometimes inherited but it is more likely that the persons presumed to inherit it are physically constituted the same as their parents and naturally susceptible to it. If children are differently constituted from the afflicted parent they do not "inherit it." Biliousness is as much of an inheritance as rheumatism, as persons of a bilious temperament are most susceptible to it and they of course get their temperament from their parents. Other authorities claim that rheumatism is caused by the presence of uric acid in the blood. Others to taking cold when their is poison circulating in the blood, others that it is purely and solely a disease of the nervous system. It is well known that when persons have acute or inflammatory rheumatism the bowels are usually constipated and the urine scanty, but it is not caused by the rheumatism rather than the cause of it, for when the bowels are kept open and the inflammation kept down, a cure is soon produced. The inflammation must be kept down until the parts are restored to a healthy condition. This is not theory as a great many severe cases have been cured in that way. The inflammation being deep seated and mostly in the joints, it is difficult to reach and but few external applications will relieve it, there is one however that will, and that is Chamberlain's "Pain Balm," one application is usually sufficient to relieve the pain and only the worst cases require more than one or two fifty cent bottles to effect a cure. To keep the bowels open always use St. Patrick's Pills as they are absorbed into the blood, act through it, purify it and thoroughly cleanse the whole system.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

Will cure a severe cold in less time than by any other treatment. It relieves the lungs, opens the secretions, renders the mucus less tenacious and easier to expectorate and aids nature in restoring the system to a healthy condition. If freely used as soon as a cold has been contracted and before it has become settled in the system, it will often cure what would have been a severe cold in a single day. It is a certain cure for croup.

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health. ### BLOOD POISON.

Old dead teeth contain the quintessence of blood poison! Who can swallow it, gushing out of old teeth every meal and healthy? These teeth are dead, ulcerated, unhealthy frequently cause a swollen face should certainly be extracted and replaced with good, artificial teeth that never ache. Can be extracted without pain. No numbing.

ABRASION OF THE TEETH.

The above cut shows the teeth of a man 45 years of age, from Dr. Bell in 1831. We meet with this affection in the teeth in various forms and degrees. The ends of the crowns seem very soft, having a low degree of vitality and wear down showing a dark yellowish cupped spot in the center. Many are so foolish as to let their molar teeth, of little account, get them gone by default; after which all the force of the muscles are extended to the front teeth, wearing them down rapidly. The best, and only remedy, is to cover and build up the ends with gold and platinum, which wears like steel and saves them many years. We make a specialty of fine gold work on building them up, contour fillings, etc.

Clubs A and B are from John Tomes, of England.

A—Two incisors with notches in the ends. B shows the peg shaped teeth with yellowish pits in the ends.

For such teeth we have two remedies: First—To fill the pits in the ends with gold. Second—Extract them and replace them with artificial teeth. But the bones absorb away rapidly so that they will need re-setting frequently.

We make the finest artificial teeth in the northwest.

We use Justice's and White's patent teeth, with long, heavy lips, mounted on strong elastic plates. Those who patronize us will not be troubled with broken teeth and cracked plates, canker sore mouths, etc.

To loose the front teeth, is to loose half the power of speech, and more than half the beauty.
