SOCIAL NOTES FROM OMAHA.

A Newsy Letter Full of Interest on Many Subjects.

From our Special Correspondent.

The weather is an inexhaustible subject it seems. The ever changing condition of the climate of this great and glorious state is certainly surprising and justifies one in expressing his surprise, pleasure or dissatisfaction at the present state of things. Snow, now, beautiful snow, has at last made its appearance and fills with satisfaction and delight the heart of our many merchants who have been anxiously waiting its advent. The smiling face of the coal dealer beams with satisfaction and the millionaire plumber is exultant. The ice man will soon gather his supply and everybody in general is happy.

The electric motors have commenced running from Omaha across the new wagon bridge to Council Bluffs. Being invited by the management to take a trip it was with curiosity that I stepped aboard and went rumbling along at the rate of fifteen miles an hour. Its working are so mysterious and the mechanism so intricate for a mind uninitiated in electrical matters, an explanation would be hard to understand.

A certain society young man whose hair is of the bricktop order, is on his ear, just because whenever he orders a cab, one with white horses is seen. Talking about red hair, last summer the charming Miss Madler, who has Brownville hair, (just the other side of Aurora) was presented with a white horse by a number of her friends, as a token of their esteem.

On Monday eve a meeting of the Western art association was held at the Linger art gallery and was addressed by Mr. Linger, who has done considerable for the benefit of the lovers of art. He has opened his large collection for inspection on Sundays.

A dancing party was given on Tuesday evening at the residence of Mrs. J. M. Brown in honor of her daughter. Dancing and merry making were the principal amusements after which refreshments were served.

On Thursday evening a reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Puppelton. The elite of the city was present.

A banquet by the Loyal Legion at the Millard, on Thursday evening was a pleasant event.

The week has been a busy one in theatrical and sporting circles, Milton Nobles and company held the boards the first three nights; Minnie Maddern, Thursday matinee and night; Beach & Bowers minstrels Friday and Saturday.

The above attractions were at the Boyd, and each was greeted with a good sized or well filled house. Thursday matinee was given for the benefit of the press club, of this city, Mr. Boyd giving the boys the free use of the house, while the services of Minnie Maddern and company were also donated. A banquet was given at the Millard.

At the Grand the only attraction has been the Haverly-Cleveland minstrel troupe. This ever popular organization with its increased strength, drew houses packed to the doors. The performance was one of great merit, especially the Japanese acts.

A social session of the Biks was given on Tuesday eve, and among the notables Milton Nobles and other gentlemen of the company were present.

The six day race between horses and bicyclists at the colosseum in the present agitation in sporting circles. The contestants are Marvin Hendley, the champion horse rider of the world, John S. Prince, champion bicycle rider of America, and T. W. Eck, champion of Canada, for a stake of $1,000.

It is surprising in glancing through the "personal" column of a large newspaper to notice the number of idiots who wish to "correspond with some one with matrimonial intentions." "What fools these mortals be," as quoted by Puck, is certainly true to nature, and of such material I am sorry to say Omaha has an over supply.

The reception at the Millard given Wednesday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Swobe, was a most delightful affair and the social event of the week. Every arrangement was perfect and each detail was carried out with the same success that all of Swobe's affairs terminate in.

Omaha, Dec. 14, 1888.

Vestibule Train to Washington.
Via B. & O. R., is the only vestibule train run from Chicago to the national capital. Every car in the train is vestibule and heated by steam drawn from the locomotive. The entire train, including baggage cars, day coaches and Pullman sleepers, runs through from Chicago to Washington and Baltimore, and no extra fare is exacted. The vestibule limited leaves B. & O. depot, Chicago, at 7:05 p. m. daily, and arrives Washington the next evening at 9:25, and Baltimore at 10:45. The Eastern express leaves Chicago daily at 10:55 p. m., and the entire train, including day coaches and Pullman sleepers, runs through to Philadelphia via Washington and Baltimore.

An Item of Interest.
Nearly everyone in Lincoln has heard of that popular stove known as the Gold Coin, the one which carried off the honors at the recent state fair. Everyone admired these beautiful household necessities and spoke in glowing terms of their merits. Mr. Lahr, the Lincoln agent, has now a line of them which he offers at prices that are certainly very cheap for such high grade heaters. If you have not seen them yet you should not fail to call at the store, 925 O street and be shown the superior quality of these stoves. Mr. Lahr also shows a magnificent line of cutlery, for table, pocket and general house use. They are of the finest steel and must be seen to be appreciated. Christmas coming on will make these articles useful for presents.

LINCOLN CITY DIRECTORY FOR 1889

A Book Containing Valuable Improvements and Many Interesting and Instructive Features Compiled and Published by The Cherrier Directory Publishing Company.

The Lincoln City Directory for 1889 compiled by the Cherrier Directory Publishing Company is about to be delivered to its patrons. From what we have seen we are in a measure to state that it is a remarkably neat, elegantly printed, and bound volume of 375 pages, showing an increase of 124 pages over last year's directory. When it is known that 180 of these pages are set up in a smaller and nonpareil type in double, triple and quadruple columns, the publishers can well be proud of the results of an honest and arduous labor faithfully and successfully carried out. The above increase in pages is in a measure due to the addition of hundreds of new names in the alphabetical part of the work, and also to the many new and attractive features embodied in its two covers. Such are indexes to 230 additions and 329 streets, besides 185 which are alphabetically classified in what is called the "Street Key." A "Street and Avenue Guide" of eight pages in nonpareil type and in four columns, an entirely new feature with this edition. A "Street Key" above mentioned, giving the names, addresses and occupations of close upon 7,000 householders, also a new feature in this work and one seldom to be found in American directories.

A general classified business directory of twenty pages, in triple columns, brevity type in which the names of over 2,000 business men and firms, under 55 different headings have been classified. A County of Lancaster Farmers' Directory of twenty-four pages, giving in most cases the section, range and township and postoffice addresses of over 2,700 farmers in the county. A most thorough miscellaneous directory of thirty-two pages in which have been compiled over 110 items of useful information concerning government, churches, banks, clubs, secret societies, educational institutions, postal guide, religious societies, of which alone there are seventy-two, incorporated companies, tariffs, etc. This part of the work certainly deserves special mention and is worthy of careful perusal. And last, but not least, an alphabetical directory of over 450 pages in small type, being a complete and reliable index to the addresses and business pursuits of some 12,000 of our citizens, showing a healthy increase in our population in the last twelve months of 4,800 souls.

Few cities in this prosperous land of ours can show such a gratifying exhibit of actual growth before the public. And as our arteries of trade are fast reaching and remarkably broad, we quite concur in the statement made by Mr. Cherrier, that ere this nineteenth century comes to a close Lincoln will have largely outgrown the present bona fide population of its sister city, Omaha. Lincoln's growth, the directory indicates, has been greater during the past year than could have been anticipated some months ago. The advance in value of intermediate property has added vastly to the solid growth of the city, and this has been not only a substantial character, but also of an ornamental one, as several elegant structures recently erected go to show.

As is well known, a well compiled directory contains more or less queer features. This year's guide is no departure from the general rule. It has the names of over 150 Smiths, the Johnsons come next with a representation of 103. The Browns show up eighty, but the Jones family seem to be in no great demand. There are a little over a baker's dozen of Adams, but no Eaves, a few Reeds, Whites and Blacks, plenty of Wilsons, a few Pecks, but no Bushels or Pints. Twenty thousand special calls were made after a first canvass which brought in over 3,000 names, thus showing the great pains taken by The Cherrier Directory Publishing Company in compiling their directories. We have noticed that in former directories fullness of information seemed to have been considerably sacrificed to economy of space, whilst the present publishers have in a great many instances allowed names to occupy two, three and even four lines to a name, whilst the alphabetical arrangement is strictest faultless. Names of members of firms have always been allowed to follow in italics, the name of the firm, and this without prejudice to their reapplying in the alphabetical order with their private residence. Such are the chief points of interest that make up this excellent work. We think it cannot be too highly appreciated by our citizens, and the least thing you do is to show The Cherrier directory Publishing Company their appreciation of their efforts to supply Lincoln with a first-class directory in every respect by promptly paying for the work when called upon to do so and heartily subscribing to their next edition, a step which we are given to understand the publishers intend to take at a very early date. This company, judging from the nature of its efforts, and strict business principals, has evidently come to stay, and stay it will we hope. The gentlemen who compose it evidently understand their business, and such we want to see and keep in our community.

We will in conclusion draw the attention of our readers to that always valuable feature of a directory, the index. That styled index to miscellaneous has been improved by multiplying the references and having the most important set up in small caps, thus greatly facilitating the finding of any particular heading. For instance, matter pertaining to burial places is doubly indexed—under cemeteries and under burial grounds—and so with a great number of subjects. The publishers point also with pride to a fat list of advertisers, prominent amongst which are to be found twenty-four pages of nicely displayed advertisements on colored pages at the beginning of the book. Their subscription list is also remarkably good, a fact which speaks well for our citizens and their spirit of enterprise. Finally we will say that those familiar with a somewhat similar publication in the past two years will readily perceive how much worthier of kind comments it is than its predecessors and will join us in saying that we have one of the very best directories ever attempted in any city. The present issue is a very handsome piece of typographical work, and it is extremely gratifying to local pride to know that the press work and binding are the handiwork of home work. As instances of the manner in which the information in the work has been brought down to date, the officers of re-elected societies, but recently elected, and the personal of the American Exchange Bank and Lincoln Safe Deposit companies appear also in its pages.

The handsome cream silk monogram handkerchiefs for gentlemen have met with a ready sale. They are only one out of dozens of new things at Herpolsheimer & Co's.
