THE HOG.
BY EDGAR THORNE.
Written for the COURIER.
I sing the hog, so fat and fine,
In language more refined the swine,
The Lord permitted—says the Word—
"Legion" to enter in the herd,
But not a syllable about
A devil ever coming out.
Therefore, we may conclude the creature,
Repulsive, vile in every feature,
Is devilish in his very nature,
Which plainly may account to us,
Why he is so obstreperous.
Fill to the brim the spacious trough,
And try to drive his hogship off;
With four feet in the feed he'll sprawl,
And clearly show he wants all.
With his companions he will fight,
And gain his point by trick or might.
Attempt to drive a certain way,
You'll find it much more work than play.
He'll give his tail an extra twirl,
To opposite direction whirling,
And with the violence of his race,
Lead you a long and tedious chase.
In vain all arguments are made,
You'll find it much more work than made.
If you would take to the south,
He'll open his tremendous mouth,
And give a squall that rends the air,
Cautious, almost, a snarl to swear:
If you'd compel him to go north,
Loud snorts and grunts will issue forth;
If you attempt to force him east,
You'll find him a reluctant beast;
If you essay to get him west,
You'll find, least it will be best
To let the imp have his own way,
And whoso'er his will to stray.
Now, look around; see if you can
Discern his character in man,
He clads himself in a neat attire,
And proudly aims at something higher,
Assumes, with all sobriety,
The charms of good society,
Wraps himself up in all the glow
That culture or art bestow,
Gains knowledge of each land and nation,
And gives himself with education.
With efforts strong and sound he'll puff,
Adorns and beautifies himself,
Affects a haughty, martial air,
A modest mien, or merits rare,
With polished tongue tries to conceal,
Defects that we can almost feel;
About his precious self are thrown
Virtues and graces not his own.
But through this drapery and fog,
You'll find him "muchly like the hog."
Like that of Satan's subtle minions,
He firmly holds his own opinions,
Cannot be coaxed, or lead, or driven,
By man on earth, or spirit in heaven.
With hot desire he seeks to gain
Whate'er he sees upon the main.
Of things on this terrestrial ball,
He is not a part, but wants it all,
And heedless of his fellow man,
He gets the whole whenever he can.

LINCOLN'S TOBOGGAN SLIDE.
A New Enterprise Just Opened For the Exercise and Enjoyment of Young and Old.
For several weeks past Messrs. Neely, Langan and Rissinger, of Chicago, have been at work erecting a toboggan slide on the site of the old base ball grounds on east R street, and on Thursday evening the opening occurred. The attraction was very large and the enjoyment supreme. Every toboggan was pressed into service and more could have been rented had the supply not exhausted itself early in the evening.
The slide is nearly a thousand feet long and runs at an incline of nearly thirty feet. Every precaution for safety has been used and every detail for the convenience and entertainment of patrons has been perfectly arranged, and although as yet snow has not fallen sufficient to cover the surface, the same effect is had by covering it with water every night which freezes and furnishes a smooth and easy riding pathway. Toboggans of the most modern pattern are furnished by the management at a reasonable rental and amusement thus far has run high every evening.
Hereafter ladies will be exclusively admitted every afternoon and at night both sexes will have use of the slide. Each of the managers will be on hand to see that proper conduct is strictly adhered to and that none but respectable persons will gain admission. It is their intention to cater to the best element of the city and in order to keep out the rough class, a fence has been erected to protect patrons, which has just been completed.
The R street line of cars go direct to the slide and arrangements have been completed whereby they enter the grounds just as they formerly did when taking passengers to the ball games. Extra cars will be put on whenever occasion demands.
This being unique amusement for Lincolinites, it is to be hoped that our citizens and young folks generally will give it a warm welcome. Every large city has a toboggan slide and to be up with the times and our metropolitan neighbors, we should turn out and make the venture made by these young gentlemen a success.
Cheap Restaurant Slang.
"So if I were to give the cook your order as stated by you, and say, 'One porterhouse steak,' the cook would broil himself to death on the coals in astonishment. I'd simply say 'brown stone front,' and your order would be served to a turn. So, fried ham is reduced to 'one in the pan,' and boiled eggs to 'two in the water.' Poached eggs, in our vernacular, becomes 'chippies on the fence,' and if desired on toast, 'three on horseback.' Scrambled eggs signify 'shipwreck,' and milk toast is furnished by ordering 'graveyard stew.' Spareribs are 'boopskirts,' and sausage in the kitchen takes the name of 'cable line.' And to summarize, soup is shouted 'howl up!' hot cakes, 'stack 'em up,' biscuits are 'life preservers.' Tea is 'Chinese fluid,' milk, 'essence of cow,' and water, simply 'float.' 'Summertime' is the call for oatmeal. The delicacy of frog's legs is known by the name of 'song and dance men without a body,' and that evidence of Boston culture, pork and beans, calls for the patriotic synonym, 'stars and stripes.' Now, what's your order! 'Patos de foie gras.' Oh, heavens! Let me make the cook commit suicide."—Omaha Herald.
A Headless Rooster.
F. D. Lacy, of Nirvana, Mich., chopped off the head of a rooster, intending to have a poppie for dinner, but the rooster, instead of giving up the ghost, insisted upon walking around as though nothing had happened. Lacy sprinkled some flour on the rooster's neck to stop the flow of blood, and apparently the rooster is as happy, lively and contented as when he had his head. He is fed through a tube. His neck is healing over, and he does not seem to suffer any pain whatever, eats heartily, feels frisky and endeavors to crow. Lacy had him photographed, and has refused an offer of $100 for him.—Illinois State Journal.
Position Wanted by a Lady.
A young lady who writes a plain hand desires employment as copyist or other office work, or would accept other suitable work, on moderate wages. Address for further particulars, M. M., care of COURIER office.
A Coldwater Man. F. M. Locke is happy. Mr. Locke stated: I bought ticket No. 46,755 through Mr. Tom Sloan, who is keeping books for Goodbar, Love & Co., Memphis, Tenn. I weighed the matter carefully, thought of it in all its different bearings and relations, before I ever invested a single dollar in the Louisiana State Lottery. Finally, I have invested from time to time, an aggregate of not more than ten or twelve dollars. I struck the lucky number in the October drawing, and have the money for the prize, one-twentieth of $300,000 being $15,000. Coldeater, [Miss.] Furner, Nov. 1.
