An Authority on Tailoring.
 Among the new business houses of Lincoln is the firm Hill & Co., who have opened a merchant tailoring establishment at 1330 O street. The senior partner is Prof. E. Hill, whose title to professorship is unique. Mr. Hill is a professional cutter. In other words, he has conducted a school in which the art of cutting custom-made clothing was taught. His experience in tailoring covers a period of nearly thirty years, one-third of it in the old country. He was in business many years in New York, where he is familiarly known as professor, and he came west for the benefit of his wife's health. He liked Lincoln best of all the cities he visited, and the climate seeming to agree with the invalid, he concluded to locate here. Prof. Hill not only does his own cutting and gives his patrons the benefit of a long metropolitan experience, but he carries one of the largest lines of cloths ever displayed in the city. He invites the inspection of the gentlemen of Lincoln and guarantees satisfaction as to modes, cloths and fits. And he invites the attention of the ladies as well, for he makes a specialty of ladies' jackets and riding habits.

The Celebrated Alaskas.
 Each season, the Alaska refrigerator takes rank with the best of these popular summer commodities. This season the Alaska comes to the public with more improvements and better adapted to general house use than any other on the market. They have received highest awards at various expositions and certainly deserve the popularity they now enjoy. The Alaskas are perfectly free from odor, constantly keep a pure air, use less ice than others, are constructed on scientific principals, made of wood that is guaranteed odorless and lastly, they make a neat and attractive appearance, adding to the appearance of any home. Mr. S. C. Elliot, who has handled these goods for a number of years claims he can get no better and consequently with a desire to keep the best for his trade, continues to handle the Alaska Refrigerator and invites the ladies of Lincoln to call and inspect them.

Fancy Names for Railroads.
 It may be a good advertising scheme to decorate the alleged fast trains of the modern times with appellations such as "Eli," "Gee-Whiz," and "Cannon Ball," to catch the eye of the traveller who does not know "tother from which," but the business man and constant traveller is not to be caught by craft of that kind.
 The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway runs its own fast trains, with vestibuled sleeping and dining cars, from Omaha and Council Bluffs to Chicago, connecting there with the fast trains, morning and afternoon, to all Eastern cities.
 The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway, in connection with the Union Pacific Railway, also runs through cars between Denver and Chicago, and this is the favorite route from Colorado and Nebraska to all principal points east of the Missouri river. This line uses no fancy names to designate its trains, but "it gets there just the same."
