IN THE SOCIAL SWIM.
 A WEEK'S HAPPENINGS CHRONICLED.

Accounts of Balls, Parties, Wedding Etc., That Have Entertained Society.

Taggart-Williams.

If the social annals of Lincoln be written by some doting chronicler of the future he will make a red letter day of last Tuesday. The illuminated initial will mark the wedding of Senator Frank D. Taggart of Hastings and Miss Louise B. Williams of this city, which was celebrated with an eclat quite beyond that of any similar event of preceding years.
 The ceremony was performed at seven o'clock at the First Presbyterian church, the handsome auditorium of which was thronged with the youth, beauty and fashion of the capital city, notwithstanding the inopportune storm. The church was very prettily decorated for the occasion. At the foot of the altar was a floral gate made of smilax, roses and Easter lilies. The altar was almost hidden by palms and other exotics interspersed with baskets of flowers.
 The arriving guests were seated by four ushers, Mr. David Taggart of Denver, Sena C. H. Cornell of Valentine, Lieut. T. W. Griffith and Mr. C. R. Richter of Lincoln. During the assembling of the company the guests were entertained with appropriate selections by Mrs. F. V. M. Raymond, who had graciously consented to preside at the organ. At the appointed hour main ribbons were drawn up and down the aisle across the pews entrance, and the Lohengrin joyous wedding march announced the approach of the bridal party. They were preceded by two pages, little Hans Huffman and Claire Funke, dressed in white with orange trimmings. Each of them bore upon one arm a large basket of cut flowers, and they marched down the aisle with measured step and the dignity of veteran social leaders. It was their duty to swing back the floral gate and permit the wedding party to enter within the chancel. After the page-boys Ushers Taggart and Richter arm in arm, who were followed by the bride leading upon the arm of Mr. William B. Wolcott and they in turn by Ushers Cornell and Griffith. As they approached the altar they were joined by Rev. E. H. Curtis, pastor of the church, and the bridegroom and best man, who had been stationed in the waiting room at the side of the altar.
 There were no bridesmaids, but the groom was attended by his brother, Lieut. Elmer D. Taggart of the Sixth Infantry, U. S. A., who is stationed at Willett's Point, N. Y. He was attired in dress uniform and lent a striking bit of color to the already brilliant scene. The bride was radiant in a beautiful toilet—a gown of delicate cream satin and fallie striped and combined with plain fallie. The front back and sleeves of the corsage were of striped fallie and the sides and vest plain. A Queen Elizabeth ruff met in a point in front, and the vest and neck were laid solid with lily of the valley trimmings. The sleeves were puffed at the top and were edged with lilies of the valley. The skirt had a court train of fallie. The front was of plain silk covered with lilies of the valley. The sides were laid in large pleats and joined to the train with panels of lilies, and the edge of the skirt was finished with large white silk cord. A large empire sash draws from right to left and tied in a large loop with a single end. The bride wore the customary veil, of tulle, and carried a small hand bouquet.
 A ring was used in the ceremony, and the golden circlet was taken from the throat of a lily in the basket of one of the pages. The short, impressive service necessary to make twain one was accompanied with the soft, subdued wedding strains of the organ. The bridal party left the altar by the west aisle, their pathway being strewn with lilies by the pages. They took carriages for the Windsor hotel and were almost immediately followed by the guests bidden to the reception tendered by Mr. and Mrs. Wolcott, brother-in-law and sister of the bride.
 A considerable part of the second floor of the Windsor had been engaged for the reception, and it presented a brilliant scene. The large court-like hall made a fine promenade, and the many elegant toilets were displayed to advantage. In the center of the hall floor was a bed of palms and century plants. On either side was a large room with tables arrayed with viands to tempt an epicure, and the guests came and went at their convenience or pleasure. The military band was stationed in the balcony above and played frequent selections. The parlor was profusely decorated with cut flowers in baskets, vases and made up. Between the west windows, pendant from strings of smilax hung a floral ball, a horse shoe and a lover's knot. The bridal party stood under these emblems in receiving the several hundred who called to tender congratulations and well wishes.
 Senator and Mrs. Taggart were assisted in this pleasing duty by the bride's mother, Mrs. Caroline Williams; the bride's sisters, Mrs. W. B. Wolcott and Mrs. T. W. Crissey, and their husbands; and the groom's brother, Lieut. Taggart.
 Mrs. Williams was attired in a plain black silk velvet en traine, Bernhardt front and back cut en princess, with two plain panels on either side, deep collar and cuffs of white point lace.
 Mrs. Wolcott, white fallie, front of old pink and silver brocade half way down with fine fallie pleatings on either side and lower half in full flounce of same material and brocade stripe bordering either side. On the right side were three plain panels edged with silver cord and lined with old pink. The left side had triple box pleats. The pointed corsage was sleeveless and had a square neck, with brocade vest and revers and Mary Stuart collar, finished with tulle at neck and sleeves.
 Mrs. Crissey, heliotrope silk with pansy blossoms. The gown was plain, skirt with en traine, square neck, sleeveless, trimmed around the neck with pansy blossoms.
 Senator and Mrs. Taggart left the parlor before nine o'clock to don traveling attire for their wedding journey. They took the B & M train for Denver, and after a short sojourn in Colorado they will return to their future home in Hastings. The bride and groom were remembered with many costly and beautiful gifts. The members of the state senate presented a game and fish set, the state officers a handsome chair and the ushers a set of solid silver after dinner spoons. After the departure of the bride and groom the band resounded dance music, and the young people improvised a dancing program, using the spacious hall for the purpose.

 Among the guests at the wedding were Senator and Mrs. Hoover of Blue Springs, Senator Pope of Friend, Senator Burton of Orleans, Senator Folk of Plattsmouth; Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Fyler, Judge and Mrs. Shackelford, Mr. F. A. Tucker, Mr. W. P. McCrosby, Mrs. N. L. Cronkrite, Mrs. A. J. Neimeyer and Mrs. J. P. Olmsted of Hastings, Miss Lily McDougall of Friend. UP STAIRS.

In our children's department this week will be found on exhibition the most handsome line of children's clothing ever shown in the city. We are sure that mothers will feel interested in this department and we have made especial preparations to suit everyone. If you want nobby, beautiful and stylish garments you can't help but be most favorably impressed. Describe any fashionable style, ask for any reliable quality, name any price for long or short pant suits and we can show it.
 Our stock of waists is simply immense; we are sole agents for the King shirt waist and are guaranteed to be far superior to any other. The buttons can be washed with the waist and never rust and warranted to stay on or we will exchange the one worn for a new one. We have all styles and sell them for almost half what you will have to pay for an inferior grade. Ask to see them. Also a large line of flannel waists, single short pants, nobby fancy white collars, etc. Remember we give the only complete base ball uniform away with every purchase in our boys' and children's department—and the famous Duplex whistle.
