

AMUSEMENTS.

A NIGHT OF OPERA.

"Said Pasha" is the latest success in light opera, will be produced at Funks's this evening. Its composer is Richard Stahl, a young Chicago musician, who is leader of the orchestra. The Omaha Republican says: "There is enough of true merit in the music, and of spirit and excellence in the performance, to warrant a favorable and even a warm notice of its excellences. The choral effects are good, and are given by a competent and well trained body of singers; the accompaniments, too, are attractive, and are well produced under the author's direction. There is a variety of principal parts, five gentlemen and three ladies appearing, all of whom have a good deal of singing and action. The comic parts of Howard and Nockey were well represented, and were productive of a great deal of merriment over their witticisms. The Said Pasha was exceedingly well made up, and well sung by Mr. Galland; Mr. McWade did Hassan Bey with spirit and sang admirably, as did Mr. Rattenbury in the part of Forrono. Scena was done by la petite Ida Malle, and Miss Sommers took the stately part of the queen. The close of the first act was well worked up, all the principal parts participating in a very stirring musical effect. In the second act the quintette and chorus at the beginning was received with favor, and the bass solo, 'The Dream of Home,' awakened warm applause. 'As Long as Love is Young' was also received with approbation. The scenic effects were very neat, and costumes were picturesque and appropriate."

A SURPRISED OPERA COMPANY.

A correspondent writes the COURIER from Omaha: There was an interesting scene (not in the play) enacted in full view of the performers of the Said Pasha opera company Monday night at Boyd's, which the fall of the curtain on the last act prevented the audience from seeing. Late Monday evening Mr. W. C. Long, known to Lincolnites as the Oklahoma correspondent of several papers during the "boomer" rush, received a telegram from his brother, proprietor of the News Bureau of Chicago, to the effect that if he wished to see his youngest sister, from whom he had been estranged for eight years, he should be present at the opening performance of Said Pasha in Omaha that evening. Receiving the telegram too late to catch the B. & M., Mr. Long took the U. P. Reaching the theater just after the curtain went down he rushed up by the stage entrance just in time to meet the little lady as she emerged from the dressing room. With a cry of "Oh, brother Will!" Miss Ida Fay (for such is her stage name) rushed into the arms of the aforesaid demure "old correspondent," to the utter astonishment of those who had not heard the joyful exclamation, and rained kisses and hugs on the glad hearted brother with the ardor of a sweet sixteen year school girl, while the surprised singers and actors looked with open-eyed wonderment, on as real a piece of acting as they had ever seen. The amazement of the beholders was the more genuine owing to the fact that Miss Fay has never been known as one of the gushing kind that mash the dude and bald headed rows. The stage manager already had a fine opposite her name when he was introduced to the brother. It is said that although Miss Fay has been on the stage less than a full season she shows signs of rapid advancement. Going on as "only a chorus girl," she has several times acquitted herself creditably in solo work. This, it is said, is not to be wondered at when it is remembered that Mr. Stahl, the composer of the opera, has aimed to surround himself with a first-class company. Among them are such well known artists as Miss Somers, Stanley Felch and John McWade of the old Chicago Church Choir company.

EDEN MUSÉE

Probably as satisfactory an attraction as yet offered by the Musée was found this week in the Rinehart family, consisting of a mother and five girls. One of the youngsters is a remarkably good eleg dancer and two others are very precocious in imitations of street arais. One of the older girls sings a song that has set all the musical dudes a-whistling. Next week's program includes Senor Alberti, the juggler; Prof. Black, who plays on seven instruments at once; Barney Nelson, seven years old, who has no arms and paints with his toes; Hackenbade's German dwarf and Jennings' Fantoom, an ingenious illusion. In the theater Bitter's dramatic company will present "Ten Nights in a Bar Room" for three days, then follow with "Uncle Josh, or the Old Homestead." There are ten people in the cast, and the company has a brass band and orchestra. Friday will be souvenir day for the ladies, each of whom will receive a pretty bottle of cachous. Saturday will be a free day for the children.

GOSSIP OF THE HOUR.

Booth will spend his summer vacation in Newport. Clara Morris is rusticated at her home in Riverdale-on-the-Hudson. Annie Pixley and her husband, Robert Fulford, have gone to Europe. Margaret Mather has closed her season and sailed for Europe for a two months' vacation. Henry F. Gillig's suit against Lawrence Barrett for $30,000 loaned him while in England is being tried in New York. Bob Ingersoll appeared for Mr. Barrett. Both and Barrett cancelled the fourth week of their engagement in San Francisco, and also in the cities of Los Angeles, Portland, Butte and Helena, Mont. Lawrence Barrett will pass the most of his vacation on board of his new steam yacht, with Edwin Booth as his guest. The tragedy will cruise between Newport and Bar Harbor. Kate Claxton will not retire from the stage next season, but will play only in New York and a few large cities. She has secured "Bootsie Baby," which has been successful in England. It cost $478,187.12 to run the Metropolitan opera house last year. The box office receipts were $213,630, leaving a deficit of $264,557.12. The assessments on the box holders realized over $200,000 and $57,028 were realized from rentals. Miss Gertie Thornton, the little lady who has delighted scores of people at the Musée this week, has made a decided hit in her character of "Ragged Matt" and copies of her song are in great demand. It is a beautiful song and Miss Thornton sings it in a touching and bewitching manner. She is a clever little lady and we wish her success. Next season the Standard theater of New York is to be occupied by Nat Goodwin in equal partnership with James C. Duff. The Standard is to be turned into a stock theater for the production of a number of comedies fitted to the methods of Goodwin. As Nat is tired of burlesque and farces, and has plenty of money to suit his ambitions in a higher form of drama, this project will fully enable him to gratify his desire to earn a reputation in pure comedy. It is not generally known that Maggie Mitchell, recently divorced from her husband, Mr. Paddock, was married once before her last alliance. On the 27th of September, 1862, she married William Virgil Wallace at or near the city of Washington. Her mother and brother were incensed at the union, and made a prisoner of Maggie almost immediately after the ceremony. She was never permitted to see him again, and seven years after she was married to Mr. Paddock. Her first marriage is said to have been a pure love affair. The name of Manager J. M. Hill's new speculation is Gladys Bird, but she will be known on the stage as Gladys Orme. She is a girl of 15, who has not yet outgrown short dresses. She is pretty and remarkably clever. For some time past Gladys has been under the tuition of a female elocutionist of New York, who had taught her to read without robbing her, as yet, of her natural grace and charm. At an entertainment the other night in New York, Gladys appeared in some scenes from "Romeo and Juliet," with Frederick Paulding as the lovelick Montague. She delighted the spectators. The auction of Mrs. Langtry's props was somewhat of a disappointment. A large and curious crowd assembled in search of souvenirs, the impression having got abroad that the Lily intended to sell off her private effects. The eager crowd of relic hunters who assembled at the recent New York sale saw a large and dusty mass of stage scenery and tawdry stage dresses and here and there some stage jewels; but what they wanted was the Lily's private underclothes, her locks of hair, her private correspondence, her presents from the nobility of England, her well-thumbed manuscripts, her poodels and her bottle of cosmetics and lotions.

Gerwig of the University cadets has gone to spend the summer at his Pittsburg home, but, unless persuaded by substantial inducements to stay east, may return west to locate. Mr. Gerwig is one of the brightest of the graduates of '89 and it is hoped he will make Nebraska his home. The latest "fad" for Lincolnites these warm Sundays is to board the eastbound flyer at 1:25 p. m., enjoy a fine dinner on the dining car, arrive at Omaha at 3, see the baseball game and start home at 7:15 arriving here at 9 o'clock. This makes a most pleasant afternoon and the entire time is put in with solid enjoyment. See? Among God's Groves. Several picnic parties have enjoyed the delights of Cushman park this week and the "times" they have had are something wonderful. It all goes to show the possibilities of the park as a place of resort for Lincoln people, and teaches them they should improve their opportunities while they last. The usual Sunday attractions will be offered tomorrow, and many hundreds will drive out and have a delightful afternoon in the woods. Young Man Wanted. A neat young man of good address who can give satisfactory reference can find steady employment at the office of the Wessel Printing Co., Burr block, soliciting subscriptions, collecting and general utility work. During the recent Mardi Gras celebration at New Orleans, a lady from Galveston while taking in the carnival, was not forgetful of the fact that it was near the time for the March drawing of the Louisiana State Lottery, she invested $1 in lottery ticket, which she brought back forgetting its possession. She discovered that she held one-twentieth of ticket No. 10,420, which drew the second capital prize of $100,000, thus entitling her to $5,000. The ticket was cashed in this city, being paid over to the representative of the fortunate lady.—Galveston, Tex., News, Apr. 2 "The Land of the Midnight Sun" must be an interesting portion of the earth's surface to visit if one may judge from the interesting illustrated article about that region that appears in Demorest's Monthly Magazine for July.
