A NEPHEW of Senator Church Howe, F. C. Howe of Auburn, has been appointed clerk of the board of bank examiners.

NEARLY fifty persons have been booked for the editorial excursion to Portland and Puget Sound. The party will leave Omaha Saturday, July 6th.

REPRESENTATIVE SWEET, who did not defeat submission, was in town this week on his way home from a trip to Washington and a visit to Evansville, Ind.

WHAT'S the matter with the Western Union? Several newspaper correspondents in Lincoln have been ordered to use the Pacific telegraph whenever they can!

FRANK D. HOBBS, the new register of the land office at Salt Lake, is a Lincoln man. At least he has made his home here for three years while acting as land office inspector.

BRAD SLAUGHTER became a United States Marshal last Monday by taking the regulation oath before Judge Dundy of Omaha and filing his bond. He immediately took possession of the office.

THE regents of the State University have instructed Prof. Bessey, acting chancellor, to engage a scientist to take the place of Dr. Billings. They have authorized him to offer a salary of $2,000.

It is said that Representative Brink, one of the new bank examiners, will make his home and headquarters at Omaha. Mr. Sanders has removed to Lincoln and Mr. McNaughton will remain at Hastings.

PROF. BENNETT, principal of the Latin school of the State University, has been called to the Latin chair in the University of Wisconsin and will probably accept. The Journal attributes it all to the late legislature, but the connection is not apparent to ordinary people.

CADET TAYLOR was in the city Thursday in the interest of the Omaha Financial Journal, a new monthly paper he has just established. He is a member of an investment company that buys and sells bonds, stocks and warrants, and he reports a good business all around.

SENATOR CHURCH HOWE was in town last Tuesday to submit plans for a new building at the Park normal school. He told a reporter that the Missouri Pacific would make no extensions this year because of the tight money market in the east and the poor crops in the west.

SENATOR LINN, who was in Lincoln the other day, says that as sure as he is alive and well this fall he will go to Colorado or Wyoming on a b'ar hunt. He has long had his heart set on it, but has been cheated out of the experience two or three years by politics. "I don't monkey with politics this fall," he declares.

THERE is likely to be a scramble for the Republican nominations for regents of the State University. Mallalieu and Hall both declare they have had enough and will not accept a renomination. At their meeting last week the alumni held a caucus and decided to push graduates of the University for the nominations.

LINCOLN is likely to have a manual training school in connection with Wesleyan university. Bishop Warren of Denver unfolded the proposition Tuesday evening. It comes from Mr. Haish, the Illinois barb wire maker, who offers to give one-half of the proceeds of his wire sold in Nebraska until it shall amount to $50,000. One-half that sum will go into a building, and the income from the other half will be applied on expenses.

SOME TYRANNICAL BABIES

DIMPLED DESTROYERS THAT RULE THE WORLD.

Infant Darlings More Destructive Than a Cyclone - But They Ride in Magnificent Chariots All the Same and Their Frocks Are Marvels of Prettiness.

[Special Correspondence.]
 NEW YORK, June 20.—There never was yet on land or sea a monarch that was as absolute a tyrant as a baby, and there never was a destructive element that was as devastating as the work of those tiny, soft hands whose dimpled beauty could be crushed out of existence by one hearty squeeze. A little baby's hand will tear to pieces, break and utterly destroy in five seconds what has taken a man or woman five hours or months of hard toil to make. Nothing is sacred to them. Papa's chronometer will be thrust into the wash basin or hammered to pieces with the same gleeful determination to ravage and destroy that would actuate the same angelic little fiend to knock over the pretty house its patient mother had built. The real Nihilist is the baby. Nothing amuses him but his work of destruction. A hammer and a mirror, a knife and a painting, water and watches, fine china and the hard floor are to him natural affinities, and to annihilate everything in the house or out of it, big or little, animate or inanimate, is his mission in life.

I say he, as girls are not quite so destructive in general, though give them a pair of scissors and everything falls, from their own curls, eyebrows and even eyelashes, to mamma's best silk dress and most cherished laces. How those tender little hands can work such havoc is one of the things past finding out. Is there a thing to upset, a thing to break, to lose, throw or give away, the cherub whose every look is a revelation from heaven and whose every tone of voice is an angel's song, will somehow manage to do it, and parents manage to live through it and keep their senses through successive relays of dimpled destroyers, and I believe they absolutely glory in it. It is always a marvel how parents bring up families of destroying angels and have anything left when they are big enough to know what they are about.

Nothing is dainty enough or fine enough to clothe the little ones in, no chariot gorgeous enough to hold so much pink and white royalty. Carriages for the little autocrats are truly beautiful, but few mothers or fathers think the finest worthy their precious tyrants. Time was when a queer little low wheeled basket wagon with glazed top was nice as could be seen, but look at the two little royal chariots herewith! They are made of gilded bamboo. One is a regular Neptune's car and the other a kingly chariot, all shining with gold and covered with a parasol lined with silk and covered with costly lace. Dainty plush and velvet and silk lap robes go with these, all embroidered in the most exquisite manner. Soft pillows covered with real lace are there for the pretty heads, and behind the whole the saucy French maid from Ballynaaboo.

The king and queen must have their royal state garments to go out in. A cunning little bonnet of embroidery and lace frills, a jaunty little sacque made of flannel as soft as thistle down, worked ROYAL GARMENTS FOR STATE OCCASIONS. In that peculiar stitch "that only mother love and patience can accomplish, and a little shawl of pure white wool, with silken tracery all over and around it, glistening like cobwebs over pond lilies, and for cooler days is the warm little long cloak of cream or pale gray or delicate blue cashmere or surah, embroidered in a pattern as pretty as baby's own rosy self, and lined with fleeco flannel. The fathers of these royal personages can furnish the hard dollars it takes to set up throne and chariot, cradle and regal garments, but the mothers' fingers must fashion all, and both are abject slaves, and, strange to say, rejoicing in their slavery. Moral—There isn't any except that it is good to be such slaves.

OLIVE HARPER.

Unanimous.

"I shall not marry Miss Crossus, after all," announced young Hjenkins sadly. "Her family seems to oppose the match too much."

"Hang the family!" exclaimed a sympathizing friend. "Go in and win, Hjenkins, just the same. What do you care for the family's opinion so long as the girl is willing?"

"That's just it," explained Hjenkins, still more sadly. "Miss Crossus seems to agree with them."—Merchant Traveler.
