PEN, PAPER AND INK.

The Magazine of American History for May presents an appetizing table of contents. Its frontispiece is a superb picture after the celebrated painting of Sir David Wilkie, of Columbus explaining his theory of a new world to the prior of the convent where he stopped to ask for bread for his little son.

The Overland Monthly for May is a truly representative number of this western magazine. Among the distinctively western articles are a discussion of the old Mission Indians by E. L. Williams; "Camp and Travel in Colorado," an account of the experience of two women and a young girl camping through Colorado, by Dagnar Mariager. "Mas-Coh-La," an Indian legend, written by Jean Claude Carlisle, and the second installment of R. S. Boynton's "Adventures in Mexico."

Freund's Music and Drama, for April 26, is an exceedingly interesting number. This issue contains a full report of the annual dinner of the music trade at New York; also a splendid portrait supplement of William Steinway, the president of the piano and organ manufacturers' association of the United States, with an able sketch of his career, written by Harry E. Freund, the editor. Freund's Music and Drama is recognized as the leading journal, and is sustaining its position by a remarkable display of enterprise and talent.

Cyclists contemplating a European tour a-wohel will find in May (Outing) an interesting narrative by J. W. Postwick of his road riding in Normandy. It is an itinerary of good roads, good time, good scenery and quaint associations, and wheel and camera in Normandy should be as useful to the cyclist en route for Paris as it is pleasant reading to the wheelmen obliged to stay at home.

The present method of scoring lawn tennis, which was fallen foul of by Mr. Robertson in the April number of Outing, is defended with pertinent reasons by Mr. Howard A. Taylor in the May number. This interesting duel may become three-cornered, and we welcome it. Such discussions are the life or sport; it is lethargy under which they languish.

E. W. Potter, the postmaster at Elm Creek, says he has personal knowledge of several cases of rheumatism, in that vicinity, that have been permanently cured by Chamberlain's Pain Balm, after other remedies were used without benefit. He has sold it at his drug store there for five years and says he never knew it to fail, that "any customer who once used Chamberlain's Pain Balm will have nothing else instead." For sale by A. L. Shrader, druggist.

Ladies, if you would enjoy life call on Miss Johnston occasionally for a shampoo. They are delightful.

Bargains in Shoes. Briscoe, the shoe man, everybody knows him, is preparing to move to the Exposition store and until the removal he will give extraordinary bargains in all kinds of footwear. His line is not broken or small, but large and well selected. You should see his spring goods. The dainty and serviceable ones for the fair ones, while for the sterner sex he has everything stylish and durable. Briscoe is always a little cheaper than the rest of them, and particularly now his goods are cheaper than ever. Call and see at 1329 O street.

While down town shopping ladies can step in at Miss Johnston's and have their bangs trimmed and curled in five minutes. None but experienced hands employed. Price 25 cents.

The reputation sustained in past years for the excellence of the Alaska Refrigerator are sufficient guarantee to intending purchasers. Call and see the new line for 1890 at S. C. Elliott's.

The new line of card cases just received at the COURIER office are worthy the inspection of the most fashionable callers. The line embraces genuine seal, oze calf, Russia leather and numerous others, including a number of beautiful imported novelties. We have them for both ladies and gentlemen.

Amenities of Journalism. Duhsh Reporter in brand new suit—it does beat all. I've just been ordered to make a tour of the slums and write a column of scenes and incidents. My clothes will be ruined.

Tramp Reporter (in rags and tatters)—I am in just as bad a fix. I have been assigned to Mrs. Nabob's ball, and I haven't a thing fit to wear.

Duhsh Reporter—I say, let's trade assignments. Tramp Reporter—The city editor wouldn't allow that, but I'll tell you how we can fix it. Let's trade clothes.—New York Weekly.

Willing to Play the Part. Jones was conversing with a friend who complained of the dissolute ways of his nephew and heir.

"But you should give him a good talking to," urged Jones.

"No use, dear boy; he never listens to anybody but an idiot."

"Perhaps," suggested Jones, with great modesty, "a few words from me might have the desired effect."—Judge.

A Hopeless Case. Galligan—Doctor, haven't you been attending on old man Giffullaw? Doctor—Yes.

"How is he today?" "He is beyond the reach of medical assistance, I fear."

"What! Is he dying?" "Oh, no; he's broke."—Exchange.

His Inferior. "You shouldn't consider any one beneath you," said the kind old gentleman to one of his employees.

"How about McKee McCarthy?" "Who is he?" "He's the man that moids the engine down in the cellar."—Washington Post.

H. P. Sherwin, 1124 O street, has a present for every one of his customers that cannot fail to be appreciated. He will give to every customer a fine crayon picture made from any photo that is desired and it will not cost a cent. Call in at his drug and shoe store and see how it is done. 1124 O street.

Furniture, carpets and general merchandise sold on easy weekly or monthly payments. Address R. Goldsmith, care drawer 63, City.

Don't buy a refrigerator until you have seen the Alaska Refrigerators at S. C. Elliott's. They are the best made, consume less ice than any other and reasonable in price. You can't afford to keep house without an Alaska.

Short-Hand. Can you write it? If not you are behind the times. Hundreds of our young readers ought to learn. The COURIER offers you the opportunity of a life-time. The lessons are furnished by one of the most skillful teachers in America, and the course which we give for $2.00 (as explained on another page) would ordinarily cost $15 at least, whether given by mail or personally.

THE "YANKEE KING" OF SPAIN.

Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, recently appointed sheriff of New York county in place of Fiack, who resigned after conviction of a crime, has in his time played many parts upon the stage of life. He was first a printer, then a lawyer, and next a politician. He went to the New York legislature in 1847, and subsequently served as secretary of legation at London under Minister James Buchanan. In 1856 he secured a seat in congress, and received a re-election two years later. While serving his second term, he killed Philip Barton Key, Mrs. Sickles' lover, and was acquitted after a trial lasting twenty days.

When the civil war began Sickles raised a brigade in New York city and rode to the front as a colonel. He rose rapidly in rank, and at the time the battle of Gettysburg took place was a major general. In that fight he lost his right leg. He joined the regular army as a colonel after the war, and is now on the retired list with the full rank of a major general. In 1889 President Grant appointed him minister to Spain. Until recently he was president of the New York state board of civil service commissioners.

The turning point in Sickles' life was undoubtedly his trial for the killing of Key. One of his lawyers chanced to be Edwin M. Stanton. After being released Sickles resumed relations with his wife, and thus alienated many who had stood by him during his previous troubles. In 1861 he had but few friends and less money. The war came, bringing with it his opportunity.

Edwin M. Stanton, Sickles' former counsel, was secretary of war. He believed in the New Yorker and admired his ability. To Stanton Sickles owed his rapid promotion, and the skill he displayed fully justified the secretary's confidence. Gen. Sickles' management of American affairs in Spain when acting as United States minister was characteristic. He stood by the Castelar administration, "bossed" Castelar himself, and got to be known throughout the peninsula as the "Yankee King." The Spaniards liked him not only because of his genuine interest and sympathy for them, but also for the reason that the general's second wife was from one of the most illustrious families of Spain.

The new sheriff, as a young man, was determined to be seen as well as see, and even as far back as when Minister Buchanan's secretary he created a sensation. The rule that the republic's diplomats should always dress in "plain garb of an American gentleman" was ignored by him at least one occasion, for he astonished the other guests by appearing at a queen's ball in the uniform of an officer of the New York state militia. A few years ago Gen. Sickles' father died at a great age, and his bequests to the son, added to the latter's previous accumulations, make the present sheriff of New York a very wealthy man.

A Young American's Extravagance. The thrifty peasantry of Switzerland have grateful reason to remember the royal progress that Charles Phalen made through their country some years ago. The young man was the only son of his father, and had unlimited spending money. He visited the little mountain republic with a magnificent equipage and numerous servants, and at each hamlet where he stopped created a very agreeable sensation. Beer and wine were ordered served to every one at his expense, dances filled the village green with buxom maidens, and dowries were given by the visiting master of ceremonies to the handsomest and most deserving brides. His lavish Christmas and Easter entertainments were participated in by entire cantons, and his expenditures continued until his father caused him to be confined in an asylum for inebriates and the insane. On the death of Mr. Phalen, Sr., the son's portion of the estate was tied up in such a manner that he could only receive the income without touching the principal. Young Phalen brought suit to have the will set aside and his share of the fortune given him outright. His prayer was denied recently by a New York surrogate, and the heir will have to content himself with less costly pastimes than those in which he formerly indulged.

J. R. Dodds, editor of the daily and weekly Arbor State, of Wynore, Neb., says: "I have seen the magic effect of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in cases of croup and colds among my grand-children. We would not think of going to bed at night without a bottle of this remedy in the house. Chamberlain's medicines are growing more popular here every day." For sale by A. L. Shrader druggist.

Have you seen it? What? Why that handsome new fountain at Pyle's drug store. It's a daisy and of the latest style and improvements. Take your best girl down for a drink of delicious soda. You will find the syrups sweet and pure and the draught delicious and healthful.
