EXPLANATION.

The signs in L 6 should be as light and small as possible. On and should are always written upwards. The vowels, altho not commonly employed in reporting, should be thoroughly learned. The student will be aided in recollecting both the character and order of the long vowels by committing to memory the following rhyme:

In the gay car See gr-ay ca-a-r. In sm-a-ll g-a-ld b-ac-ts,

T-a-li d-oc sh-oc-ts. Suggestions-Frequently review former lessons. Carry this paper in your pocket and devote spare momen study. Correspond with two or three other students, using characters as far as you are able. If requested, the Author will furnish addresses. SHORT-HAND IN TEN LESSONS

Short-hand reporters must be able to write many snousands of different words, but ninetenths of all the writing they do consists in taking down over and over again only a few hundred very common words. Evidently the first requisite to skill in stenography is a high degree of (amiliarity with just this class of words and phrase). The reporter writes "is may, will-be, I-can, do not," hundreds of times to "ocean, extracting, caliber, indigo, delve, etc., etc.," once.

The Chicago & Atlantic Railway's Limited. Travel on the Chicago & Atlantic has greatly increased of late and the merits of this great line have been so well appreciated by through travel between Chicago and the east that it has been found necessary to restrict passen-gers of second class travel from using the Limited Vestibule train and hereafter none but first class tickets will be good on that train. See the company's new advertisement on page six of this issue.

PEN, PAPER AND INK.

In the Forum for June is begun a series of autobiographic articles by some of the fore-most men in England and America, pointing out the chief formative influences on their education and careers. The first of these is by W. E. H. Lecky, the author of "The His-tory of the Spirit of Rationalism in Europe," It is one of the few contributions that this eminent historian has ever made to periodical literature and the first to an American periodfcal. He reviews the development of thought in England during the life of the eneration just passing off the stage.

The Jenness-Miller Magazine for June is replete with interest for every woman, and full of suggestions most timely and helpful. The Countess de Montaigue writes a most fascinating paper on "Lawn Parties." The article on "Fine Laces" is the best illustrated of all the valuable articles which have appeared in the series on this subject. "Summer Recreations," by Florence Howe Hall, tells people the true way to recreate. "Moral cersus Conventional Charity" is an able argument for broader charity, by Laura Giddings. The Fashion article is one no "sweet girl graduate," or young woman with "class-day" in anticipation should over look.
