

COMFORT FOR THE FEET!

Life Made Easy

BY BUYING SOME OF THE

FINEST AND

More Comfortable

SHOES

Ever sold in Lincoln. To try them on is to buy. These goods to be found only at

Webster & Roger's

1043 O Street.

MISS

Alice Isaacs

OMAHA,

LATE WITH STERN BROS., NEW YORK

LATEST

NOVELTIES

— IN —

MILLINERY

Very Lowest Prices.

In the Store of Heyman & Deiches,

1518-20 Farnam Street

OMAHA.

UNION PACIFIC Tickets ON SALE

TO ALL Principal Points

EAST, WEST, NORTH AND SOUTH

— AT —

1044 O STREET.

E. B. SLOSSON,

City Passenger Agent

Hayden Leading PHOTOGRAPHER!

Fine Bust Cabinets $3 per dozen. Special rates to students. Call and see our work.

Studio, 1214 O Street.

Open from 10 a. m. to 4 p. m. Sundays.

J. S. EATON, Physician and Surgeon

Office: 116 S. Eleventh St.

Telephones: Office 685. Residence 562.

LINCOLN, NEB.

Dr. J. B. Leonard's Nervous System, Heart and Blood

Practice Limited to Diseases of the

REFERENCES:

Hon. Wm. L. Gresham, Attorney General, Hon. T. L. Norval, Associate Justice, Jones' National Bank, Newark, Citizens' National Bank, Lyons.

OFFICE: 1222 O Street, LINCOLN, NEB.

LINCOLN Business College

AND INSTITUTE OF PENMANSHIP.

Shorthand, and Typewriting, is the best and largest College in the West. 400 Students in attendance last year. Students prepared for business in from 2 to 9 months. Experienced faculty. Personal instruction. Beautifully illustrated textbooks, college journals, and beautiful illustrated penmanship, sent free by addressing LILLIBRIDGE & ROOSE, Lincoln, Neb.

LOCAL AND PERSONAL.

J. G. Shea of Omaha, is in the city.

J. P. Davenport is at Fort Dodge, Ia.

E. B. Baxter is in Missouri this week.

C. A. Lancaster has gone to Denver.

Mrs. H. S. Stoner is at Johnstown, Pa.

Rev. W. J. Marsh is in Wichita, Kansas.

J. G. Hawkins has gone to Leetonia, Ohio.

L. E. Regnier has returned from Beatrice.

C. W. Kaley was in Kansas City this week.

W. H. Goodrich is visiting at Dunkirk, N. Y.

M. V. B. Towner has gone to Richmond, Ind.

C. F. Best departed for Pueblo, Col., Thursday.

J. D. Blake left for Memphis, Tenn., Monday.

Mrs. H. B. Wilson left for Colorado Thursday.

Mrs. George Sherrer has gone to Albion, N. Y.

Mrs. Frank Sherwin left Thursday for Illinois.

Robert Muir was a Chicago visitor this week.

F. M. Woods was a Des Moines visitor this week.

Rev. J. S. Edwards has returned from Salt Lake.

Miss Jessie Lander left Tuesday for Eldora, Iowa.

O. W. Webster has been ill for the past ten days.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Howlette are in St. Paul, Minn.

Mrs. J. P. Hebard of York, is visiting Mrs. Morse.

Miss Grace Griffith has returned from Colorado.

Miss Laura Easterday is visiting friends in Omaha.

Miss Jane Conley left Tuesday for Galena, Illinois.

Miss Jennie Carlisle has gone to Topeka, Kansas.

C. Miller was a passenger for Chicago, Monday.

John Light departed for Victoria, B. C., Monday.

Dr. J. R. Haggard departed for Atchison Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Vanderpool have gone to Chicago.

Thomas Price left Thursday for Portland, Oregon.

W. A. George departed Tuesday for Helena, Montana.

John Silman started for Quannah, Texas, Thursday.

Al E. Ewan started for Hot Springs, Ark., Thursday.

R. P. Sell departed for Helena, Mont., Thursday.

L. J. Byers and wife are sightseeing in Colorado.

Mrs. E. A. Van Brunt is visiting in Albany, N. Y.

Mrs. F. E. Gage has returned from Hartford, Conn.

Mrs. J. W. Sharp left Tuesday for Pasadena, Cal.

Flomon Drake of Omaha, was in the city this week.

Miss Emma Nelson left Tuesday for Tacoma, Wash.

Mrs. C. H. Holmes is seriously ill with typhoid fever.

W. J. Houston is spending a short vacation in Colorado.

The Omaha exposition opens Sept. 22 and closes Oct. 13.

The Central Law college of this city will open Sept. 24.

Mrs. T. C. Munger left for Cedar Falls, Iowa, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Hadsell left Thursday for Girard, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Parris left Wednesday for Keeler, Cal.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Townley are visiting in New York City.

Mrs. J. D. Schraeder and son have gone to St. Paul, Minn.

Mrs. E. R. Paddock and sister left for Illinois Wednesday.

Miss Eva Fry of Bloomington, Ill., is visiting the Misses Hill.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Wells departed Monday for Okala, Florida.

Mrs. W. S. Garber has returned from a visit at Red Cloud.

C. D. Traphagen is spending a two weeks vacation in the east.

Dr. Charles F. Goodell departed Thursday for Washington, D. C.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Martin started for Albany, N. Y., Tuesday.

H. W. Kelley has returned to Lincoln after nearly a year's absence.

Fred Howe and Frank Hathaway were Omaha visitors Tuesday.

Arthur Hamilton was a passenger for Topeka, Kansas, Thursday.

Mrs. I. J. Starbuck was a passenger for Salt Lake City, Thursday.

Miss Vinnie Pursley of Atchison, Neb., is visiting friends in this city.

Rev. H. A. Guild and daughter Georgie have returned from Denver.

W. A. Sellock is entertaining Mr. and Mrs. A. Sellock of Owatonna, Minn.

Rev. E. A. Bell was a Chicago passenger on the Burlington Wednesday.

Valentine Weiler and Samuel Brohman departed for Guelph, Ont., Monday.

Mrs. A. Halter and her cousin Miss Nellie McCabe left for Denver Tuesday.

Rev. D. Specker of Dakota City, is the guest of Rev. Luther P. Ladden.

J. S. Barwick was called to Linneus, Mo., Sunday by the illness of his father.

Mrs. James Heaton and Mrs. Alice Williams left Monday for Topeka, Kan.

Miss Anne Funke returned Wednesday from a short visit with relatives in Omaha.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Hayden of Mt. Vernon, Iowa, are the guests of J. A. Hayden.

Miss Ella Viggers of Omaha, visited at the residence of Major Bohannon this week.

Miss T. A. Mann entertained Miss Mary Dumans of Greenville, Pa., this week.

The oratorio society has commenced rehearsing for the annual winter's recital.

Mrs. Dr. Cooke entertained James Brackin and mother of Greenville, Pa., this week.

Major Sawyer has been entertaining John E. Young, an attorney of Exeter, N. H.

F. H. Straub left Thursday for Potosi, Wis., where he will wed Miss Lena Wyckendahl.

For Engraved or Printed Wedding Invitations always call on the Wessel Printing Co.

Miss Emma Sizer and A. J. Sizer of Ottawa, Ill., have been visiting Col. E. R. Sizer.

Miss Lou M. Tait of Beatrice, who has been visiting in this city returned home Tuesday.

E. E. Bennett was called to Oshkosh, Wis., Thursday by the sudden death of his father.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Demorest are entertaining Miss Grace Stone of Rochester, N. Y.

Additional local and personal page 5.

Well, Sarah, what have you been doing to make you look so young? Oh, nothing much, only been using Hall's Hair Renewer to restore the color of my hair.

Two Nominees for Governor.

Hon. E. B. Winans, whom the Democrats have nominated for governor of Michigan, is a farmer. His Democratic opponent, Mr. Turner, is also a farmer, so is the Prohibition candidate; likewise the Union Labor party man. But of all these Mr. Winans is the most thoroughly a Granger. He may be seen any day with his overalls rolled to the top of his old boots busy at some agricultural work.

He has served two terms in congress. He was born in New York state 64 years ago, moved to Michigan in 1854 and was educated in the district schools and at Albion college. He had the gold fever in 1850, and went to California in a wagon. He mined for eight years, returned and bought a farm near the little town of Hamburg, and has lived there ever since. Besides his four years at Washington he was two terms in the state legislature, and has been judge of probate.

In Delaware the Republican nominee for governor is Harry A. Richardson, the youngest man upon whom such an honor has ever been conferred by either party of the little commonwealth. He is a native of Camden, Del., and was born 37 years ago. The present is his first appearance in the political arena. He is in business with his father at Dover, and has the reputation of being wealthy.

Collecting Islam Literature.

At Tashkent, a city of Asiatic Russia, is to be found probably the largest collection of Islam literature in the world. It owes its existence to Gen. von Kaufman, who instituted a search, immediately after the battle of Samarcand, for the library of Tamerlane, often referred to in Persian and Arabian writings. No trace of this ancient collection could be found, but partly by persuasion and partly by force he acquired many valuable and rare books from the priests and learned men. These formed the nucleus of the present library, which, after the conquest of China, was greatly enriched by innumerable costly volumes secured at the sacking of the palace of Chan Mahommed Rachim. A large number of theological works, the property of Chan von Kokand, were also sent to Tashkent.

A Young University President.

The new president of the Northwestern university at Evanston, Ill., Henry Wade Rogers, is only 37 years of age, but has already acquired a wide reputation for scholarship. He is a lawyer by profession, and in religion a Methodist. His birth place was Buffalo, N. Y.

His parents, Wade by name, died while he was an infant, and he became the adopted son of Mr. Rogers, a wealthy philanthropist, who gave him every educational advantage.

He was graduated from Ann Arbor university in 1874 and from the law school of the same institution two years later. He practiced at Buffalo and St. Louis until 1884, when he was chosen to succeed Judge Thomas Cooley as head of the legal department wherein he had formerly been a pupil. He remained at Ann Arbor until elected president of the Northwestern university.

The Lincoln Steam Laundry having recently changed hands and undergone many improvements is now better than ever prepared to execute work in the very best manner, promptly and at popular prices. Mr. A. W. Day the new proprietor has adopted a new and improved process for washing and handling garments, by which no bleaching or injurious materials are used; the finest fabrics such as silks, laces, flounces, flannels or cotton goods are laundered in first class manner, without the least damage. One trial will convince the most skeptical that the Lincoln Steam Laundry does the finest work in the city. All goods called for and delivered. Telephone 62.

The success of Mrs. Annie M. Beam of McKeesport, Pennsylvania, in the treatment of diarrhoea in her children will undoubtedly be of interest to many mothers. She says: "I spent several weeks in Johnstown, Pa. after the great flood on account of my husband being employed there. We had several children with us, two of whom took the diarrhoea very badly. I got some of Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diarrhoea remedy from Rev. Mr. Chapman. It cured both of them. I know of several other cases where it was equally successful. I think it cannot be excelled and cheerfully recommend it" 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by A. L. Shader.

"Want" Ads for the Journal.

In order to serve the convenience of its patrons who may wish to use the "want" columns of the Journal the OFFICE will receive such advertisements at the regular rates and transmit them to the Journal.

Wedding cake boxes, all styles, Wessel Printing Co.

Novelties in Wedding Cake boxes—100 different shapes at Wessel Printing Co.

All the latest sheet music, new stock, at Crancer's Art Music store, 212 south Eleventh street.

Oysters in every style at Brown's.

STRICKEN DOWN ON THE STREET.

The Sudden Summons That Came to Judge Noyes, of Ohio.

It was just after the close of court at Cincinnati the other day that Judge Edward Follansbee Noyes met a friend and condoled with him on the loss of one they both loved as a brother. Said the judge: "The ways of Providence are mysterious and past our finding out. We must abide by them. From them there is no appeal. But it does sometimes seem that death always takes those we learn by contact to value and love the most highly."

Not five minutes later Judge Noyes fell a corpse upon the street, stricken down by apoplexy at the age of 58. He was a native of East Haverhill, Mass., and a graduate of Dartmouth. In 1838 he began the practice of law at Cincinnati. When the civil war began he abandoned the office for the field, and while acting colonel of the Thirty-ninth Ohio regiment lost a leg in battle. Recovering from his wound he reported on crutches for duty, and was made a brigadier general and assigned to the command of Camp Dennison. Later he left the army to assume office as city solicitor of Cincinnati. Then the people made him probate judge, and in 1871 he was elected governor of Ohio. At the end of his term he accepted a renomination, but was defeated at the polls. When Mr. Hayes secured the presidency he made Mr. Noyes, who had been one of his most active supporters, minister to France. At the expiration of his term he returned to Cincinnati and resumed the practice of law. Two years ago he was elected superior court judge, and occupied that place at the time of his death. He leaves a widow and son.

Governor Campbell has appointed Mr. J. Rhiner Saylor to succeed Mr. Noyes on the bench.

BELLAMY'S PUBLIC UMBRELLA.

A Theorist's Idea Put to a Practical Test in England.

Those who have read Bellamy's "Looking Backward" will recollect that one of the ideas advanced in that remarkable book has to do with "public umbrellas," or otherwise covered footways in public thoroughfares. A new street in Brixton, England, is being constructed according to the Bellamy plan. It starts from the principal thoroughfare and curves around toward the station. The roadway is broad, and the covered pavement on each side is ten feet wide. Light iron pillars support a glazed roof, from which are suspended numerous gas lamps. When it is finished the covered way will, it is said, be a well lighted promenade, open to the fresh air, and at the same time thoroughly protected from storms and heat.

VIEW OF BRIXTON'S COVERED STREET.

Authors and Critics at Odds.

The critics—those gentlemen who sit in judgment on the productions of authors—have been of late impaled by the pens of two well known writers—one British and one American. "All current criticism," says the first, "is falsely principled and conditioned in evil; but if anonymous it is usually 'savagely and dishonest.' The other asserts in satirical vein, "The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order." Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The most amusing sentence he has written is, however, where the drollery is undesigned. 'You say,' he writes, 'that you authors have never profited by our observations. Perhaps not. But there are other resorts in satirical literature. The critic can really produce good work on subjects of little or no importance, but he should not meddle with fiction of a high order.' Says The London News: "It is impossible to avoid the suspicion that both these authors, though old enough to know better, have yielded to the temptation of reading some unfavorable reviews of their own books, and they are naturally incensed that the mask of the anonymous prevents them from identifying the writers and tearing them limb from limb. One critic has gone for them and shown himself also to be master of language. Another has confined himself to satire. The