SPRING NOVELTIES.

[Special COURIER Correspondence.]

The dreary days of winter now are done. The robin sings from out the lilac tree, The crocus comes again, and listen love, The building rocks are cawing cheerily. —The "Tonic Wrestler."

NEW YORK, Feb. 18, 1891.—The spring season once inaugurated by the display of the first importations of dress goods is made to advance with rapid strides, even though by the calendar it is still winter, and "eternal mildness" seems a dim far away blessing almost beyond reasonable expectations. Each day now, the shops are adding some fresh novelty to their attractions. And all the milliners, modistes, and tailors are busy in creating new designs for all manner of feminine apparel. Of course this activity is particularly marked at Redfern's, where they not only have hundreds of visitors to examine and select from their spring models, but are also overwhelmed with correspondence through their mail order department. It is quite feasible and satisfactory to order in this way. All that is necessary to secure a perfect fitting coat or bodice is to send with the selected samples, a few exact measurements and an old bodice which fits, and in due time there is received a costume which is in every respect equal to one ordered by word of mouth. Am! now what about these stylish gowns? Here's in the first place a Redfern house gown of black wool with stripes of velvet. The skirt is quite plain and narrow, and is finished with ruching. The bodice is untrimmied, and is cut out in turrets at the edge.

Prof. W. E. Chambers of Council Bluffs has been in the city the present week making arrangements to open a dancing academy soon in Masonic Temple.

The other gown may be worn in the street. It is of blue cloth with a border of braiding done in black and gold. The bodice has one of the new Redfern specialties, in the full box-pleated skirt which is set in beneath a braided band on the hips. A braided plastron ornaments the upper part of the waist.

I have a cousin who is a printer, says ex-Mayor J. B. Loughran of North Des Moines, Iowa. Some years ago he was employed in his city where they were printing circulars for Chamberlain. He had a deep seated cold and terrible cough, and while setting up copy he made up his mind to buy a bottle. It cured him and that was the first I ever knew of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I have been strongly in its favor ever since. My own experience and that of my family convinces me that this remedy is the best in the world. That may be strong language, but that is what I think. The modern magazine may be taken as embodying the best literature of the world, as the magazine editor pays the highest price to novelists, scientists, statesmen, soldiers, and even kings and princes for the best they can furnish in the literary line. The well-edited magazine becomes an educating influence in the family circle, whose importance cannot be over-estimated. The children, as they grow up, are attracted by its illustrations, and so come in time to have a taste for reading. There is always something that is new, something that is strange, something that is interesting, and we consider that we are doing our readers a positive benefit if we are instrumental in placing such a publication within their reach. The special arrangements which we have made with the Cosmopolitan presents very unusual inducements. That magazine is already as one of the most interesting publications of the day. It is seeking subscribers everywhere and obtaining them. The proprietors believe that the Cosmopolitan has only to be examined to secure a permanent subscriber. That is why we are enabled to make, if the offer is accepted before January next, such a low rate, by which our readers can obtain the Cosmopolitan for little more than the cost of this journal alone. Just think of what this combination means! You obtain your own home journal at about the regular price, and have thrown in a magazine which gives you, in a year, 1,536 pages of reading matter by the ablest writers of the world, including over 1,500 pages of illustrations that are unsurpassed in point of interest and execution. Will it not pay you to send a subscription to this office for THE COURIER and the Cosmopolitan immediately? Remember only $3.00 for the two—the price of the latter alone is $2.40.

Doctor Koch's Discovery.

Dr. Koch's great remedy seems to prove efficacious in those cases where the patient has contracted consumption in low lying countries. Almost all the level European districts where the disease exists it is traceable to purely climatic conditions, the moist atmosphere being a fine breeding region for the microbe. But in the high and dry altitude traversed by the Union Pacific, the original Overland Route, consumption not only cannot exist but is surely curable in its early stages. An this is testified to by thousands who have regained health and strength in the life-giving air of the mountains. 2-1114-191.
