Rebecca Social. The social feature of that noble order is to be extensively revived and cultivated in every indication.

South Lincoln. Mrs. Lancelotti is quite sick with fever at her home 1426 south Twelfth street.

Consoling Reflection. Fredwy was on his first sea voyage. Pale, limp and ready to die, he lay groaning in his bunk.

Spotted Lions. "Have you seen the lions in Central Park?" asked a New York gentleman of a little boy.

Complimentary. Gertrude - I have just received the proofs from the photographer.

Generous. Mr. Whitegoods - Really, Mrs. Coldham, your table seems to be getting poorer every day.

The Open Season. "You think you are getting a little fly, don't you?" said the man to the trout as he leisurely pulled him in.

Notice is hereby given that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Nebraska Railway Company, for the purpose of electing seven directors to serve for the ensuing year and for the transaction of such other business as may legally come before the meeting, will be held at the office of the company in Lincoln, Nebraska, on Wednesday, the fourth day of June, 1891, at eleven o'clock A. M.

Omaha, May 1st, 1891.

HE KICKED.

But the Other Fellow Had Some Grievances Too. "I have traveled on this road for fifteen years," said the loquacious man to his neighbor.

The other looked out the window, making no answer. "I remember riding on this road once when it took four hours to go seven miles," the first speaker added.

No answer. "It's a scandalous outrage that the public should be treated in this way." No answer.

"Some day the people will rise in their might and put a stop to such things. It's just such insolence as this that caused the French revolution." He shook his head savagely and glared at a brakeman.

"I'm going in town to keep an engagement at 9 o'clock. I'll bet you even money that I'm late." There was no reply to this offer.

"I'll bet you two to one." The other shook his head, giving the first indication that he was not deaf. "I'll bet you two to one that I'm half an hour late."

"No; I won't bet," said the second man. Just then the train stopped, and the indignant passenger jerked out his watch. "Ten minutes late now!" he said.

"Brakeman, what's the trouble now?" "The brakeman did not know." "If I'm over half an hour late I'll sue this road for damages."

The other occupant of the seat smiled sadly. "Hang it! You're always late, just when I don't want you to be late." The brakeman looked at him pityingly.

"I don't see how people tolerate it," the angry man went on. Then turning and looking at his companion he said fiercely: "You don't seem to mind this stop much?"

"No," was the answer. "Travel on this road much?" "Yes." "How long?" "Every day since it was built." "And you don't kick at this thing?"

"Well, you're a job." "My friend," said the man of few words, in a subdued voice, "have you any interest in this road, any money invested in it, any claim against it?"

"No," was the reply. "My friend, I have had three crops of hay burned by sparks from locomotives on this road. I have had three Jersey cows and a horse worth $1,000 run down and killed by trains. I was smashed in a collision once, and staid in a hospital for five months."

"Well!" gasped the first speaker. "I have been a stockholder in this road since the first train ran over it, and I have never had a cent of dividends out of it. I wear a cork leg since the accident. I have seven acres of fine hay land which I never touch. I don't dare raise any cattle. I can't get any insurance on my life. My dear friend, you ought to thank your stars that you are so fortunate."

"Stranger," said the other, "I beg your pardon," and then there was a long silence. -New York Tribune.

He Wasn't.

A man with a paint pot and brush was at work on the front steps of a house on Third street when a pedestrian halted and called out:

"Hello! So you are painting, eh?" The painter put aside his brush, wiped his fingers on a piece of paper and descended to the walk to reply:

"My friend, I am sorry for you, but by keeping your eyes open and always being prepared to dodge the fool killer you may pull through."

"What do you mean?" "You asked me if I was painting?" "Yes."

"Well, I'm not. I'm gravel roofing these steps. Can't you see the gravel? Isn't the far kettle right here? Can't you tell the difference between gravel roofing and painting?"

The other looked at him for half a minute, sized him up as the biggest man, and turned away with:

"Some folks can't be civil to save their blined necks! Go on with your old pile driving!" -Detroit Free Press.

Sisterly Affection.

Freddy - Ain't sister Alice good to me? She lets me blow my own nose. -Munsey's Weekly.

Baby is Sick.

The woeful expression of a Des Moines mother's countenance shows of his deep anxiety was not entirely without cause, when he inquired of a druggist of the same city what was best to give a baby for a cold. It was not necessary for him to say more, his countenance showed that the pet of the family, if not the idol of his life was in distress. "We give our baby Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," was the druggist's answer. "I don't like to give the baby such strong medicine," said the mother. "You know John Olsson, of the Watters-Talbot Printing Co., don't you?" enquired the druggist. "His baby when eighteen months old, got hold of a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and drank the whole of it. Of course it made the baby vomit very freely but did not injure it in the least, and what is more, it cured the baby's cold. It is not necessary to give poisons to cure a cold or for cough either." The mother already knew the value of the Remedy, having used it herself, and was now satisfied that there was no danger in giving it even to a baby.
