The Hot Springs of Dakota.
These springs are rapidly becoming famous on account of the wonderful curative properties of the waters, and the many marvelous cures which have been effected by the thermal baths.

The town and springs are delightfully situated in a picturesque valley in the Black Hills country, abounding in beautiful scenic effects, and at an altitude of 3,400 feet above the sea level; thus insuring a pure atmosphere and exhilarating climate, absolutely free from malaria.

Under the enterprising and progressive management of the Hot Springs company many desirable improvements have been made; among the number the erection of a commodious bath house fitted up with all modern conveniences for the comfort of guests. New hotels have been built and comfortably furnished throughout, conducted in first-class style and at reasonable rates. Those who prefer stopping at a private house will find many desirable boarding places where good accommodations are furnished at moderate prices.

The superior daily service now afforded by the Burlington Route to Hot Springs, with through sleeping car accommodations from Omaha, Lincoln, Aurora and Grand Island, makes the trip an easy and enjoyable one; and for the benefit of all who desire to test the efficacy of the waters, round trip tickets at reduced rates, good for ninety days are now on sale at all offices of the Burlington Route.

For pamphlet, descriptive of the springs, and full information as to rates, time, etc., apply to any agent of the company, or to

DESCRIBED BY OLIVE HARPER AND SKILLFULLY PICTURED.

Toilets for the Promenade That Would Gladden the Daintiest Feminine Heart. A Gown for the "Angel of the Household."

[Special Correspondence.]
NEW YORK, June 11.—I have often been amused watching women pass each other. If they are friends they will stop for a moment's chat, but as they go their separate ways each will give a swift but comprehensive glance at the other's costume, which takes in every detail, from the flowers on the hat to the tip of the boot, and hers is an uneasy conscience who has mended gloves or a made over gown. She feels the enormity of the sin to the innermost fiber of her nature. On the other hand, what a glow of pride fills her heart when she knows that her costume in its entirety is flawless. I don't see exactly where a flaw could be picked in the elegant gown and wrap on the left of this picture, the gown being of exquisite beige colored cloth embroidered across the front of the skirt by hand in a rich arabesque pattern in silk but two shades darker than the goods done in cross stitch in the old style. It is so odd that it looks beautiful, besides it is so refined. The skirt is slightly draped in front, and the rest is laid in heavy plaits. Over it is worn a jacket of brown velvet, the front embroidered and ornamented with amber beads. It opens over a fall of black lace, which forms a nest, and the full sleeves are of lace. There is also a ruff of black lace around the throat, and a dainty little capote combining the materials and colors of the rest of the costume. The gloves are tan and the parasol brown. Now who could find fault with that?

The other promenade toilet under adverse criticism is made of Rubens pink cashmere, with a sounce around the bottom of the front breadths of printed silk crape, the prettiest material ever made. This is festooned with bows of black velvet, trimmed with the richest beaded passementerie and lace. The little capote is of Rubens pink crape, with a shell trimming of the same all round the edge, and the gloves are pearl gray. The parasol is of black silk and lace, with one beautiful rose and its foliage on it. I don't think I would care if all the women in New York turned up their noses if I had such a pretty outfit. I would try to bear their contumely.

The "angel of the household" is the young girl who makes herself pretty and dainty for home comfort, and to her is this costume dedicated. It can be made an economical one as well, for the coat basque, being so very dressy, can be worn over almost any dark skirt, or a black one. The basque can be of ruby, prune, blue, brown or black velvet, and the edges should be embroidered slightly in silver thread, or gold thread if preferred. The vest should be of satin cream, white preferred, and worked with the same metallic thread as that used on the coat. Good velvet can be bought for two dollars per yard, and velutina, which is as handsome and wears better, for one dollar, and it requires three and one-half yards of velvet, or three of velutina, to make such a basque, and five-eighths of a yard of satin. A surprisingly elegant result for so small an outlay.

The peleries and capelines, the tudor cloaks and incroyable redingotes, are seen hourly, some of them undeniably beautiful and others again as undeniably ugly and awkward. The sensible woman will wear pretty drab jackets, made dressy enough for a nobby occasion by the dainty and rich galoon and exquisite braiding and the fine finish.

Crepon as a dainty material for summer is a decided favorite, and this trimmed with fuchsia and cascades of silk THE ANGEL OF THE HOUSEHOLD. chiffon, and this in turn edged with fluffy, downy feathers, makes a gown as ethereal as a summer cloud, and almost as unattainable. Lace in cascades, in billows, in waterfalls and avalanches seems to have fallen over all the summer gowns, and they are so pretty. I think lace is the very loveliest trimming that can be applied to anything, no matter what, but there is such a thing as getting too much of it in one spot, and that is when they make the ruffs for the incroyable coats.
