The e drummers ere fe'l of stories and some of them are so good a fellow can't help a suspicion of the'r genuinene's, but here is one that is not wholly improbable, and may ast somebody scheming. A drugg st found a stray nickel on his floor and in picking it up a brilliant ide., fleshed through his mind. He wrote th's notice and paste I on the giess in his door: "Found-a sum of money in this store. The owner will receive the money by correctly describing it." The number of people, predicule by men, who bad lost money was something astonishing. Dozens came in every day while the notice was up, and the mourn, of tales of cash locas would fill revere! books. As a . . le the men stepped up to the cigar case and made an investment. Occasionally it was only a nickel, but generally it was nothing less than ten cents or twenty-five cents for three eigars. Apparently the seller felt that this patronage might incline the druggist to favor his claim to the lost cash. The ciger trade actually become so great that one or two brands were ex-bausted. Of course no one came o cla'm a nickel. The applicants had lost sums reng-ing from $5 up into everal hundreds. According to their owner it wer imposible 'a many ce as that the locar could have drop-ped his money in that perticular store, a" of which Custrates some of the poculiar ties of human nature and shows how ide. Saturday nights b'll at the Funke was an attractive and ente : ' 'ng one end wes en-joyed by a 'r ge audience. The play wes ne less the a our Swe lish Ariend Ole Oleson and the ver ous characters were well placed and generally well taken. Ben Hendricks is an inimitable Ole Ole on and his clever work crited forth frequent applance. His dialect is good, his makeup true to nature and the part throughout well acted and ad mirably characte iz.d. After Evers, a pop-ular Lincoln favorite resumed the role of Genie and made r." out of the pr. that wes of it. She sa p 'ns' 'ng soubrettof bandsome face and form, a sweet voice and a graceful dancer. She divided the honors of the evening with Hendricks. Mr. C. T. Lorraine did some good work as the dector and Miss Lowise Hali es creditably performed the role of Agnes. The Itish women character was placed in splend'd bruds when eutrus' d to Mas St George Hussey who as used the role in a manner to delight a'l. Aside from these the cent was only fe'r. The tremp rs done by Mr. John Buckland needed more nature and the Pau' Jorden, the villan, if such a character was ever fotended for the play, found poor interpretation with Mr. Al. Trayer. During the lest act the Swedish lady quartette rendered a number of selections in their national tongue which were several times encored. Teken as a whole it was a good show and seemed to please everyone that sat in the large audience.

"Little Trixie" was the name given to a specialtie put on exhibition at the Fonte Tuesday night.
