WOMEN'S FALL GOWNS.

THEY ARE TRULY SUPERB THE PRESENT SEASON.

Olive Harper Describes the Wonderfully Good Effects Obtained by the Combination of Faille and Velvet, and Here Are Cuts to Make the Story Clear.

(Special Correspondence.)
NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Nothing makes a more superb gown than the faille fringed with velvet. The cord is heavier and the texture more glossy and lustrous than ever before, and it falls into such rich folds that it is a delight to the artistic eye. The colors are also very beautiful. The warm, golden tinted wood browns are particularly handsome. An imported gown which was on private view last week had a plain full demit train falling from gathers in the back which were sewed to a pointed bodice. The sides were adjusted so that they laid smoothly over the hips, and the skirt opened in front, disclosing a front of velvet in a deeper shade of the brown so that it showed reflections of gold in the folds.

All around the skirt and on the waist was a narrow passementerie cord of brown silk and gold braid. The waist had a peculiar shape, there being but one dart, and that set forward and trimmed the whole length. A V-shaped piece of the velvet was inset at the neck, and the forearm part of the sleeve was of velvet. The whole dress is a model of simple elegance. It can be copied in cashmere or any other preferred material. It is for a visiting or carriage dress, though it is quite handsome enough for dinners at home, where low necked gowns would not be liked by the majority of ladies.

FAILLE AND VELVET COSTUME.

Another very handsome faille and velvet costume, imported by the same house, has the underskirt of petunia purple velvet, made quite plain and with a demit train. Over this plain skirt is a princess dress of heliotrope faille, the skirt slashed from bottom to top and cut away so as to show the velvet. These slashes are left loose and lined with taffetas in a lighter shade of the same color and bordered all around with black and gold passementerie half an inch wide. The waist is cut out in the back, as it is in front, and trimmed in the same manner. The pretty little bonnet is of the faille, with a butterfly of the velvet edged with passementerie and finished with three plumes at the back.

A very pretty variation from this would be to have a moss green Velutina skirt, with a fawn or mastic or tan or a light brown overdress of camel's hair or light chevot, or the underskirt could be of seal brown, which is a favorite color.

Yesterday I saw another of these slashed dresses. It had a petticoat of black satin, and the slashes were of orange satin or silk covered with black Chantilly lace laid on flat. It had been chosen so that each panel held just one complete figure of the design. The pattern should be a pretty one for this. Old lace dresses that have seen their best days would doubtless have enough of good places to get enough to cover the slashes, and it could be tacked on so as to render it a little stronger. The waist can be almost any shape but plain basque, with the draperies and accessories of the lace and orange satin. This is a very becoming style for ladies of any complexion.

This week I have seen some novelties in the way of embroidered skirts. One is of light gray ladies' cloth, and across the foot of the skirt is a border of fur—otter beaver or oon down—and this is cut out in scalloped points, and above is a close and handsome embroidery in silk of the same shade. They are very expensive but very sumptuous, and will be worn for early fall by those to whom money is no object and longed for by the rest.

Ladies buy the gauntlet gloves and embroider pretty flowers with fine jet gilt or steel beads on the cuffs, sometimes their own initials.

A tiny pocket is now set in at the collar of the dress to hold the watch. Of course if the watch is very large this won't do, but if small it is all right. A small gold chain hangs down with a tiny anchor of gold, or a basket or some other pretty device.

The bell effect will be seen on nearly all of the walking dresses, but there will be very little dip in the back.

It is not now considered necessary to have many out door dresses. Each young lady, even of the wealthiest families, has one nice chevot or other woven walking dress for best new each season, and one that is second best from the past season, for a dress of good material will with ordinary care do for at least three seasons, with perhaps a slight alteration. But the day has gone by when it was a disgrace to wear the same dress in the street more than once.

ADDITIONAL DRAMATIC.

The critics speak highly of Edith Hamilton's performance of Lyons in John Palmer's "Last Days of Pompeii," which comes to the Lansing in December.

The seats for the first production of "Theridion" in New York were sold at auction October 1st at Charles Forthman's Twenty-third Street Theatre.

Louis James and Frederic Wardle pool issues next season and star jointly. They promise to produce the new plays, "The Lion's Mouth" and "Mennon."

Major Charles E. Rice's "McCarthy's Mishaps" Company opened the season at the St. Charles Theatre, New Orleans, on Monday to a jammed house. This attraction is booked at Funk's.

The Bostonians have accepted a new opera, words by Arthur May, music by E. A. Newcomb, both of Boston. Name of opera not yet decided upon. The Bostonians will be seen this season at Funk's.

Charles Frohman's new Columbia Theatre, in Boston, is a beauty. It is to be a strictly comedy house, and it will be produced the works of Bronson, Howard, Sardou, Gillette, Belasco and De Mille, and Charles Frohman's New York successes.

There is a prospect on foot in New York in the shape of a big theatrical fair in December to benefit the Actors' Fund. The booths are each to represent a particular theatre and attended by a bevy of handsome actresses. Good looking actors are to appear at certain hours.

"Natural Gas," which is a late season attraction at Funk's, has been blazing away at Washington this week, and its brilliancy has reflected hearty laughter and good feeling on very large audiences at the National Theatre. Meanwhile the ever popular Sam Cox quietly scooped in nearly $20,000 in the box office for his stars, Donnelly and Girard.

Last Monday night, at the Baldwin Theatre, Sol Smith Russell made his first appearance in San Francisco in several years. He presented "Fountain Valley," Edward E. Kildie's new comedy. A telegram received in New York says Mr. Russell was most cordially welcomed by a large and fashionable audience. Russell will be seen at Funk's in November.

Monday night Frederick Paulding began the third and last week of his engagement at the Standard Theatre New York, where "The Struggle of Life" has made so much of a success that he could continue for a longer term had not a previous contract been made to present the play at Mrs. John Drew's Arch Street Theatre in Philadelphia on Monday Mr. Paulding has, however, arranged to return to New York in November for a second engagement, the Lansing in January.

The company to support Harry Lacy in the production "Jack Royal of the 92," which was produced at Philadelphia Monday is composed of the following members: J. H. Fitzpatrick, J. H. Bunney, Harry Hatto, Ernest Tilton, James Lackayo, Myron Galley, Ladbey Hurst, Claude H. Brooks, Logan Paul, Phil Hunt, F. H. Tyler, Henry Daus, Mary Hampton, Kate Hawthorne, Maud Monroe, Marion P. ### A DILEMMA.

To write or not to write that is the question. Whether 'tis nobler in the mind to suffer the reputation of being asked by a young lady to write in her autograph album, and having kept the book two years, more or less, and then not written in it. Or to take pen against a host of doubts and fears, and, by once writing, end them? To start—to write—to write—perhaps to make a bid—say, there's the rub; For in that darksome hut what feelings are shown forth, nervousness, distrust of self, and many others?—Not as, forsooth, when one is writing to his girl; for then, if he should make a blot, he draws a line through it, and says it was intentional, and meant to mark a place where he did kiss. And she believes the yarn and kisses it. And believes that she is happy.
