THE CATHOLIC UNION'S PARTY.

The Catholic Union club has made a strong bid for recognition as a prominent factor in the social life of Lincoln. Its first pleasure party at Temple hall Wednesday evening was one of the best managed and most enjoy-able affairs ever held in the city, creditable allies to the society and its individual mem-bers. Something like one hundred of the members and invited guests participated in the pleasures of the occasion, and to say that members and invited guests participated in the pleasures of the occasion, and to say that all were well pleased and happy is to state the simple truth. The guests were cordially welcomed by the reception committee, com-posed of Mears Chas. McGlave, J. F. Kern, J. J. Conoughy, W. V. Barton, James J. Condon, Dr. T. F. Britt, M. Corcoran and George Cuming, while Mears John Curran, T. E. Kelley, J. H. O'Neill, N. Lawlor, W. C. Fitsgerald and A. Weiss acted as floor managers, performing their duties with the sease and attention of veterans in that line. At nine o'clock the terpsichorean 'carnival was inaugurated by the grand march, in which Nicholas Lawlor and Miss Emms Halter gracefully led. The program con-Halter gracefully led. The program con-aisted of eighteen numbers, and it was three o'clock before the strains of "Home Sweet Home" floated through the hall and the final good nights' were spoken. Supper was erved in Odell's dining hall and was in keeping with the rest of the appointments. Robert Browne's Lansing Theatre orchestra furnished music. The club was organized aly a year or so ago, but now has an active bewitching music was wafted to the ear, delighting the large audience. The ad-dresses of welcome were delivered by C. A. Atkinson of the official board of the church, G. W. Berge on behalf of the young people, and Superintendent G. W. Adams for the Sunday School. Dr. Lasby respondel in a pleasant manner, thanking his congregation for the interest and earnestness of their efforts. The speaker concluded by assuring them the occasion would prove an additional incentive to his labors in their midst.

LOCAL TALENT IN "PAULINE."

The presentation of the operetta "Pauline, or the Belle of Saratoga" by local talent at the Funke Wednesday evening called out a good audience, despite the many other at-tractions in the city that night. Part I was composed of musical selections. Two was composed of musical selections. Two very pretty pieces were sung by the male quartette, comprising Mesars C. W. Ray-mond, H. J. W. Seamark, T. E. Sanders, and J. B. Barnaby. Mrs. A. W. Jansen was billed for two solos, but owing to illness was unable to be present. These two numbers Mr. Seamark filled by a sweet little song and in responding to an enthusiastic encore sang "The Maids of Lee." Miss Grace Burr and n resp Mr. Curtice played a couple of mandolin duetts which were greatly appreciated. Miss Jeannette Willson favored the audience with a beautiful whistling solo and as an encore rendered "The Mocking Bird.' A well executed violin solo by Miss Burr completed the first part. Without attempting to tell the story of "Pauline," which comprised part II, or to give a detailed criticism, it way be said that the operetta was well adapted to the purpose and that the ladies and gentlemen interpreting the same succeeded admirably in creating a favorable impression. Miss Richardson, the Belle of Saratoga, was delightfully facile and graceful and her singing was notably "Clara Rivers" the rival of "Paul good. ine" was portrayed in a most vivacious manner by Mrs. C. W. Raymond. Bott Both furnished music. The club was organized only a year or so ago, but now has an active membership of sixty-five progressive young men, who are much encouraged by the social and financial success of their malden effort. Some of the costumes worn by the ladies were exceedingly rich and attractive. Following is a list of those present. Messers and Mestames, Chas. McGiave, An-drew Halter, H. H. Gaffey, Wm. Hogan, T. F. A TRUE STORY OF THE PRODIGAL SON

T was towards the close of a bright summer's day that the prodigal son arrived at the paternal mansion. He had come by the quickest route, "The Burlington." The sun was declining in the west-the only thing that does decline west of Chicago except base ball-and its slanting rays threw a golden tint upon the gray hairs of the aged father who sat on the front porch reading the last "Burlington Route" advertisement.

The gate opened, and the old man peering over his spectacles discried a a ragged tramp coming up the walk. He was about to set the dog on him, in accordance with the usual custom of that hospitable region, when the trampcan.e up, removed a dilapidated hat rim which encircled his brow, and cried, "father, don't you know me?" "Know you?" returned the old man, after scrutinizing him a moment over his spectacles, "I would know you if I saw your hide hanging in a tan yard, it's my own lost b-hoy!" Then the fond parent fell upon his son's neck and wept-wept because it was so dirty, it hadn't been washed since Christmas, but he took him in all the same, gave him a bath and a new suit of clothes and then walked him down to the B. & M. depot to see to what perfection the "Burlington" had brought their passenger train service. 'Twas marvelous, and the prodigal son straightway registered a solom yow that his children and his children's children for all time to come should recognize the "Burlington" as the one great railway whose equipment was always UP TO DATE.

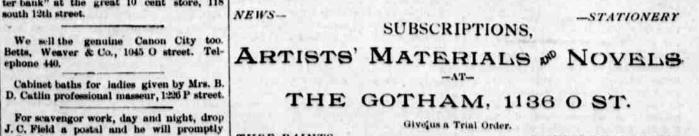

We don't know how this legend of the prodigal son came down through the ages so accurate and free from side issues, but it's here, intact and unincumbered, ready to adorn a back cover or point a moral. The moral of this story is: if you would prosper in this world, travel only by the "Burlington Route."
