THE LOVE

If the people who make the almighty dollar the standard of all things, who go through life worshipping it, hewing and toadying to those who have it in great abundance, to be used for self gratification, could have witnessed the flocking of the masses to gaze once more on the face of a dead friend, Rev. Charles E. Spurgeon, they must certainly have had an intimation that this life does not consist of great possessions. It touches hearts on this side of the great water to read the accounts of the working people who were, during his life, in touch with the spirit of this great hearted man, flocking in great crowds to look upon this dead friend who had in life come down to their level that he might win them to a better way. Only a plain pine coffin, no flowers, no pompous ceremony. Yet few men so loved as he by the lower classes, the working women, girls and men. Why was it? Was he immensely rich? Only in love, only in kindly words and helpful acts, and the stooping down to place himself on the level of those he wished to benefit. Money alone may command for a time that which may be called respect, but with its vanishing or the flickering out of the candle of life, only the ashes of disappointment are left to the unsatisfied worshiper. A life of unselfish love and helpfulness, even in its passing away in death, leaves the star of hope brightly shining, guiding those who come after, and lighting up the path of those who desire to walk in that pathway which "grows brighter unto the perfect day." There is no royal road or copyright on such a life. The path is open to all and what the world needs more today than anything else is a genuine sympathy and a helping hand for the poor struggler on life's rugged road, marked by so many wrecks and stained by the cut and bruised feet of many a weary pilgrim.

Three or four of us were sitting around the other night discussing topics of the day between the whiffs of delicate blue smoke that curled up from our meerschaums, when the conversation turned on the subject of smoking. One of the party used to be an inveterate cigarette user.

"Do you know why it is that a man does not inhale the smoke from a pipe or cigar as he does from a cigarette?" he asked.

"Of course none of us knew."

"Well, I'll tell you. I worked over it a long time before I solved the problem. The pipe smoke is so much stronger and affects the nerves so much quicker than the cigarette that one rarely enjoys more than the first inhalation. The mildness of the cigarette is its most beautiful feature."

The chief of police at Newark, New Jersey, is wholly right. He has ordered that no girls under sixteen will be permitted on the streets of that city after 9 o'clock at night unless they are with their parents or other adult persons.

—Exchange.

Well, well, well! There's a pretty how-do-you-do! And so the dear little masters and other creatures unfortunate enough to be under sixteen are not allowed on the streets of the city of Newark any evening after nine o'clock. That is something of an innovation in police circles, and one which I fancy the Jersey blue coats will soon tire of. The task of looking after all the little big misses and hustling them off the streets is not apt to prove a very congenial one, as some of the coppers are likely to discover to their sorrow. When they begin to enforce the order there'll be music in the air.

It is the general opinion that cigarette smoking by children and youths is doomed. The rules of health demand it. The coming generation, if it is to be any better than the present, should have this restraint put upon it, a strict prohibition of the use of tobacco in any form until the boys and girls have reached their majority. If this is done it will save many a candidate, now being prepared by this pernicious habit, from the insane asylum. In Nebraska, especially, which is to come to the front with sober, clean mouthed young men and women, in the next few years, this matter should have due attention by the present legislature. The filthy habit can not be wholly eradicated by law, but it will be of great benefit to a portion of this community if the five and ten-year-old children can be restrained for a few years until the better habits are formed in the later life. Cigarettes are a deadly poison, not immediate in its workings, but slowly and surely. After the habit is once formed it is like the horse-leech daughters of old, crying "give, give." A young man in one of the eastern states recently confessed that he was compelled by clamorous appetite to smoke a hundred cigarettes each day. He is now under a physician's care with the hope that his mental disorder may be cured or at least improved. "You can not make people good by statute" but you can prevent foolish young boys and girls from dulling their intellects and defiling the temple which should contain a pure mind and heart.

It can be said with a great deal of truth that many reformers are like the guide posts at cross roads. They point the way but don't move an inch in that direction. Men who preach pretty extensively, and loudly too at times, send their energies in this way but have no time, if so inclined, to put their theories into practice. If one of these worthies were approached for inconsistency on this score he would put on a far away look and exclaim, "Ah just, so but you know the theorizing is my part and the carrying out and putting into practice is for the people—the common people if you please. It is enough for me to point out the way. No one in these days of enlightenment expects to lead, any more than in war for a general to be found in the front ranks. You see a man who stands head and shoulders above the people is enabled by reason of his position to see what is best for them, while you reserve the right as an intelligent being to think and act for yourself in your own private capacity." That's good logic, is it not? A kind of a high toned dress suit in which to give the public the "grand razzle dazle," while the soul which is to live forever in happiness or misery is steeped in iniquity. It is high time men and women everywhere learn there is only one true standard of morality and honesty for rich, poor, learned and ignorant. There will come a time when masks will be stripped off and all will stand on an equal footing, and where silks will not command greater respect than rags, as passports to favor or honor.

George Thistler, aged 75, and Sallie Barton, aged 71, were married at Jefferson, Ia., last Sunday. What I want to know is whether or not this is an exemplification of the old adage that "the course of true love never did run smooth" or whether it is an affirmative of that other trite saying—"The fools are not all dead yet." Can anybody enlighten me?

BUSINESS CHANGE.

Mr. F. W. Stevens of Port Huron, Mich., has purchased a half interest in the business of the Wessel Printing company, the change taking effect March 1st. The new firm which is composed of Mr. Stevens and L. Wessel, Jr., will carry on the business at the old stand, 1134 N street, under the title of the Wessel-Stevens Printing company. Instead of the Wessel Printing Company, as it has heretofore been known. The change will prove of material advantage to all concerned, the interests of the firm's customers being especially benefited. Mr. Stevens is a pleasant, upright gentleman, and a thoroughly practical printer, having spent a lifetime at the business. He assumes entire supervision of the mechanical department of the firm's affairs, which has greatly enlarged its facilities for the execution of high class job work. New types, borders, rules, etc., have been added to the office and today it has one of the best equipped outfits in the city of Lincoln. Along with this, a complete stock of stationery, fine writing papers, cards, etc., have been added and the firm anticipates a large and growing retail trade in this line. In addition, one of the finest news depositories in the city will be put in, where all the daily newspapers, magazines and periodicals will be kept constantly on hand. The gentlemen have ample facilities for conducting their business and, with the new vigor infused into it, the Wessel-Stevens Printing company has every prospect for a continuation of the successful and extending patronage which the former proprietor enjoyed.

In the spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

And the fancy of his love turns longingly to that new diamond ring he has promised her and already in fond anticipation, she feels the golden band encircling her slender finger and sees the myriad of countless flash lights glisten and glitter from its polished surface like an oriental vision. Ah, no! But these are sweet and happy thoughts and fancies, fitting companions of the pleasant day dream of youth. To a pity to interrupt them, a pity to waste their refreshing fragrance on a cold and worldly world whose only concern is of the mighty $, to whom one hundred cents is the standard of greatness by which men and women are judged. But since this is the case, the young man will subvert his own interest by examining the latest styles in diamond jewelry, silverware and the like at Eugene Hallets the Eleventh street jeweler.

FROM CHICAGO.

A Lively Budget of Chatty Gossip From A Lincoln Girl.

It was not surprising that my last letter appeared one week out of season considering the late date on which I forwarded the copy to Lincoln. I might remark by the way, that I was surprised to find myself a classmate "ahelic." On glancing over the letter, I perceive that a page of it got lost in the press. If it did not materially affect the point of a story making it utterly senseless without the point, I should not mention this slight slip, but in the story about Sol Smith Russell the gambler was left on his knees. He has been there nearly two weeks. I think the wondering public will be glad of an explanation of why he was there. The story is that he said if he believed Sol Smith to be sincere in his pathetic narrative concerning the fallen women of New York, he would beg him on bended knee to give up the stage and become a minister of the gospel. It has been nearly two weeks since I wrote the Courier yet I have seen fewer Lincoln people than I usually see in half that time. J. A. Harris was here Sunday business; he was registered at the Palmer House. I had a little chat with Miss Bessie Tuttle last week she is succeeding with her work at the Art Institute, as every one knew she would, and has a circle of very warm friends around her in her little province in Chicago. She still does mission work; Bessie always did have a penchant for mission-boys—she certainly has a wide enough field. This reminds me of a story Ida Bonnell told me last Friday. She said she had been doing some little missionary work Sundays. To use her own words "When one's ministers wife commences a story of a little girl who lives in Nebraska, one naturally expects something racy. But Mrs.—heard the record. She asked if any one could tell her what kind of houses people had in Nebraska, and one bright eyed ragged little urchin shouted "God!!! Mrs.—said "Yes," can you tell me why? Some one suggested extreme poverty but she shook her head and no one else ventured an explanation. She said: Nebraska is one continual sweep of prairie and if the people built their houses of brick or logs the terrible cyclones and tornadoes that sweep across the vast prairies would blow down the houses and kill all the people, so they all live in sod houses," and Miss Bonnell added with a hearty laugh, "So I've quit the missionary business." She told me she and her sister Pearl started that evening for Lincoln so I suppose they are there enjoying themselves while I grind away in my office matters. Theatricals are not brilliant Heien Berry's "A Night's Frolic," is bright and catchy and has enjoyed good houses. Mar-secret Mathers, first performance of her new play "The Egyptian" was a failure. A clever curtain raiser and five acts of the drama kept people till midnight. The work of Miss Mathers and her two leading men was superb. The rest of the company was utterly at sea and the voice of the promoter and mismanagement generally marred the performance. It is continually improving however and the curtain raiser has been omitted, so that the performance is now a credit to a really talented actress. Next week Bernhardt comes, but of course you have all been to Omaha to hear her before this. We have had a rare musical treat this week at Central Music Hall "Paderewski."
