

THE WRONG MAN.

The Terrible Mistake of a Disturbed Householder.

It was wash day at the house of the Ferguson. The clothes had been in soak for more than an hour.

"How does it happen," he demanded fiercely, "that the soap my wife ordered three hours ago hasn't come yet?"

"She ordered a lot of stuff at the same time," said one of the clerks, "and we filled the order as quick as we could. The boy with the delivery wagon is on the way there now."

Mr. Ferguson went back home. Mrs. Ferguson reported that the grocer's boy had come and had delivered everything she had ordered—except the soap. It had been overlooked somehow.

Mr. Ferguson, boiling over with wrath, was about to start on another trip for that soap, when the laundry lady made her appearance again.

"There's a man at the back door," she said, "with an order book in his hand. I think it's the grocer himself."

Then Mr. Ferguson went to the back door. "You've come yourself this time, have you?" he shouted.

"Yes, sir," said the man. "Got that soap?"

"No, sir, but!"

"You haven't! Do you know, sir, that we have been waiting all this morning for a few bars of cheap, common, yellow soap, sir? Do you know that I've had to make a trip to your store on purpose for that soap myself and then did not get it? What kind of way is that for a man to do business? We could have waited an hour or two longer for the lettuce and the cucumbers and the strawberries and the cans of tomatoes!"

"But!"

"And there wasn't any particular hurry for the broom and the scrubbing brush and the peck of potatoes. But we wanted that soap. The girl's been waiting for it for two or three hours!"

"But!"

"And a whole washing is going to ruin for want of it! I won't stand it! You can't play a trick like that on me a second time. We've only been in this house two weeks, and we have got all our groceries from you. We have ordered something every time the boy has come around. We have spent more than twenty dollars at your store, and we're not going to spend any more. You've got every cent out of us you're going to get. We shall try some other grocer. You will find it doesn't pay to!"

"Will you let me say just a word?"

"It won't do any good, sir. My mind is made up. What do you want to say?"

"I'm the iceman!"—Chicago Tribune.

He Was Philosophic. "I am very sorry," remarked the wife when the waitress brought in a huge cube of corned beef and placed it on the table, "that we have no mustard in the house."

"It is really terrible," replied the husband; "but come to think of it, we haven't any champagne in the cellar, have we?"

It Was May.

They were talking about overparticular people and each one gave a sample.

"Well," said a drummer for a Detroit stove house, "the most particular man I ever saw was from Cincinnati. I came across him in a Cleveland restaurant."

"Sure it was a restaurant?" interrupted an Indianapolis man.

The Detroit drummer simply showed his red ribbon.

"On the night of April 30 last," he went on, "it was nearly midnight when he came in and called for oysters. The waiter was slow and did not return until five minutes after the clock had struck 12, and that chap refused to accept the order on the ground that oysters should not be eaten in any month that didn't have an 'r' in the name."—Detroit Free Press.

Debarred.

One of the men who are always sure and never make mistakes recently stopped at a western hotel. On going to his room for the night he charged the landlord to call him in time for an early train.

"No, don't you forget. The 5:30. That's the train I want."

"But the 5:30?"—began the landlord.

"Never you mind anything about the 5:30. I know all about it. You call me in time to get it. That's what you're to do. See?"

"All right," replied the landlord, a little shortly.

At 5 o'clock the next morning there was a tremendous thumping at the door of the man who wanted to rise for the "5:30."

"Getting an early start, ain't ye?"

"No. Always take the 5:30 when I go through here."

"One of the directors of the road?"

"No."

"Superintendent of division, maybe?"

"No. What are you trying to get at?"

"Nothing. Only the 5:30 was taken off the time table yesterday, and the first regular train doesn't pull out till 9:15. Didn't know but you had some official connection with the road, and was going to pull out on a special 5:30 all by yourself. You wouldn't let me tell you last night, but p'raps 'tain't too late now."

THE CARPENTER'S WOOING.

The Chicago Post publishes a humorous poem, entitled "The Carpenter's Wooing," unconscious (it is to be hoped) that under the same title a similar style of verse was published more than thirteen years ago in a St. Louis paper, and a sequel published in the Boston Journal. These are the three poems:

THE CARPENTER'S WOOING. Oh, I adore you, darling one, I hail you loved your father, And hand you intend to grant The hand my hopes are rafter?

THE CARPENTER'S WOOING. "Oh, beam my wife, my awl to me!" He cried, his flame addressing— "If I adore such a love as yours, I'd ask no other blessing!"

AT THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA.

Truly, it was an enchanting scene, so bright, so beautiful and novel withal, that I walked about with curious delight, forgetful of all the means which enabled me to intrude upon the fishes' domain, until I was brought to my senses by a sharp jerk on the life-line, this being an interrogation from Jack as to whether I was all right.
