

ADDITIONAL DRAMATIC.

(Continued from first page.) his last visit here the piece has undergone various changes and much new material has been added. "Little Puck" has been before the show-going people of the United States and Canada for five seasons and as a bright sparkling comedy has no superior and but decidedly few equals. The piece is constructed about Mr. Daniels and no production in which he has appeared has ever given him an equal chance to show his various eccentric and novel qualifications. He is certainly original and alone in a line of comedy peculiar only to himself. Like Sol Smith Russell, there are none who can imitate him. Many have tried, however, but none have successfully ever come anywhere near his style of acting. His career on the stage has been an interesting one, as successful and ever promising as it has been bright and mirth-provoking. His first work of merit was a Johnnie Bobbie Twit in the "Electric Doll" with the Jollities nearly ten years ago, then came a bigger hit as "Sport" in Hoyt's "Rag Baby." But his present success is the greatest of his life, and now after five seasons of "Little Puck" it comes to us again reconstructed and greatly improved. Bessie Sampson, Mr. Daniels' leading lady, is still in the cast which is stronger and larger than ever. Seats for this engagement, which is for one night only, go on sale Tuesday morning.

OLE OLSON DRAMATIST. That original Swedish dialect comedy which has set the dramatic profession agog and led the way to followers of the Swedish drama, is looked for one night next week at the Lansing theatre. In Ole Olson we have a pure, refined and unadorned character, full of the brogue and eccentricities of the fatherland. His actions are replete with ideas novel and amusing to us, and his work is such as requires the services of the very best theatrical talent to interpret. Many can imitate the Irish, Negro, Dutch or French characters, while but few have been found that were able to successfully undertake the Swedish delineations. Manager Shuck has a great company with him this season and Ole Olson will be given in all its quaintness and original features that characterized its success last season both here and abroad. The specialties introduced are of a high order and the musical numbers are particularly strong and entertaining. The dancing introduces some of America's most noted heel and toe artists, and some new and very pretty movements are given. The seats go on sale Thursday morning and if you want a good seat it would be well to make such wishes known early at the Lansing box office.

LINCOLN PARK ATTRACTIONS. The past week has seen large crowds at the park and the performances of the Boston Specialty company have given general satisfaction. There are several very clever people in the cast and their work has been applauded on every appearance. The vocal numbers have been exceptionally good. The dancing showed marked ability in that artful movement. The engagement closes tomorrow evening when a grand farewell bill will be presented.

Prof. Levey of the National Coursing association has arranged to give another exhibition at the park tomorrow, which he guarantees will be a successful and enjoyable affair. Fact is that on his last exhibition his machine, which by the way is a novelty, had not arrived, and live and untrained jack rabbits were used instead. The machine that the professor uses is one that works automatically and shoots decoy rabbits that have every appearance of the live animal. The dogs make the same desperate effort for these, and make the run similar to a race track, those going under the wire first winning the race. It is great sport, and is more exciting and more enjoyable than when live game is used. The race takes place at three o'clock and a number of speedy canines that have already been entered will be on hand.

Readers of THE COURIER will be pleased to learn that the management has reengaged the Boston Opera company for another series of operatic productions. The engagement opens Monday evening with the "Mikado," which will run until Thursday when "Giraffe" will take its place. The company has been greatly strengthened since its last opera was produced and the work will be put on even better than heretofore. The Boston Opera company has some very fine talent and their work next week will undoubtedly draw larger audiences than ever.

THEATRICAL CHAT. The critic rises early, and he rises for a lark; He takes his breakfast leisurely Then rambles through his park. Out fishing in the lakelet, Or boating he will go; For how to spend the summer The poor critic doesn't know. He sighs for some new drama, Or even a burlesque, To find excuse his brain to use And chain him to his desk. But ah! his sighs are needless, Regrets are merely vain; P. S.—The critic doesn't care One tinker's mill race if he never sees A play or a theatre again.

And now it is said that Nat Goodwin may appear in a new nautical comic opera. Mary Magin's new play "On Change" was produced in Chicago Sunday and was well received.

Manager David Henderson's magnificent "Ah Babs" will be brought to the New York Garden theatre during the season.

Stuart Robertson is yet in Europe amusing himself. His season begins at Col. Sinn's Brooklyn theatre September 19th.

It is said in Philadelphia that Harry C. Miner has bought the lot on which the Central theatre stood and will erect another place of amusement on it.

Young George Gould, the son of the railroad magnate, will manage the Grand opera house when T. Henry French's lease expires in May. George will of course not attend to the business for he has bigger fish to fry in Wall street. He owns the building and proposes to get all the profit in it himself.

A number of printing firms that make a specialty of preparing material for theatrical companies have formed a combination for mutual protection. These firms have decided that they will do no business with a man who owes one of their number any money. All the firms have agreed to keep one another informed of the managers who are in their debt. The combination is in the line of a trust, and takes in a number of big firms. At a convention of the theatrical unions held in New York last week the following schedule of wages was approved: For carpenters, gas men, property men, stage hands and machinists, not less than $50 per week; travelling machinists $35 and assistants $20; machinists when not travelling $25; property men, including assistants, $35; property men when travelling, $25, assistants $20; electricians or gas men $21; stage carpenters $21.50 per day; stage hands and fly men $1.50 each performance, 50 cents per hour for rehearsals and double time for Sunday and extra work.

The Business Keeps Up. The fact that during this hot season Louis Meyer & Co. keep on doing a large business attests their popularity with the public. Low prices, reliable goods and fair treatment is the secret to it all. For the past two weeks the firm has been conducting a closing out sale of summer goods at prices that were sufficient to make even unbelievers in bargains take advantage of the prices and goods offered. They are determined to get rid of all the light weight summer goods and if cut prices will be an inducement to you to buy, you'll have no difficulty in making a deal on most anything you want. Remember this sale does not continue for ever, but closes next week. You know when you've got a bargain! Call and see Meyer & Co. and you'll recognize a bargain in most anything of which you ask the price. Just now their well assorted grocery stock is larger than ever and your special attention is called to invoices of imported canned goods and delicatessen. When you want bargains in dry goods or something real nice, rich and juicy in the way of groceries, Meyer's is the place to go for it.

Did as Ordered. Mrs. Malaprop has a host of followers who never heard of her, or who if they should hear of her would see nothing out of the way in what she said. The following true story could perhaps be matched by other Mrs. Malaprops. A well known Rochester physician was hastily summoned to attend a sick child, whom he had already visited once. The Physician (entering)—What is the matter with the child? Mrs. M.—Oh, sir, I don't know. The Physician—Well, what have you done for it? Mrs. M.—I only gave it what you told me—the condemned milk and impaired food! It is little wonder that the child had indigestion.—Rochester Post-Express.

"Blowing It In." Cutting a Knot. There is a man in Manchester named Will Knott. When in a hurry he signs his name "Won't."—London Tit-Bits.

THE PRESENT DAY.

How Much Better Things Are Than They Used to Be. Her eyes were open, but her cheeks yet glowed with the warm flush of sleep. Languidly she gazed at the sunlight playing upon the tinted wall.

"Jane, Jane!" The sound of a voice was wafted to her ears and her delicate lip curled scornfully as she recognized the accents of her mistress.

"Jane, are you going to get up?" She raised herself upon her elbow and brushed aside the lace curtains of her couch, suffering the light of day to stream over the sumptuous covers and rich hangings.

"What do you want?" She spoke sternly, not to say resentfully. The voice grew suddenly softer.

"Won't you please get up?" it pleaded. She ruminated. "Is the fire started?" she presently inquired.

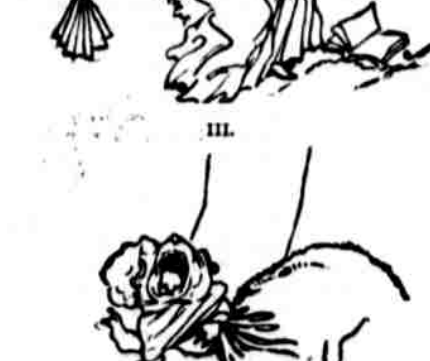

"Yes, Jane." "And the steak pounded?" "Yes." "And the coffee ground?" "It's all done, Jane." "And the biscuits mixed?" "Yes."

With a smile at herself in the mirror opposite she rose. "All right," she cried, "go right ahead and if I ain't there by the time"— She released the wealth of brown tresses and let them fall in billows about her shoulders.

"Breakfast is ready. Don't!" She proceeded leisurely with her toilet. "Wait for me. I'll!" She was braiding her hair with deft fingers.

"Rather eat alone than miss my beauty sleep." "Thank you, Jane." As she slowly dressed she reflected how vastly the condition of the hired girl had been ameliorated within a comparatively few years.—Detroit Free Press.

The Bear and the Summer Girl, or, Practice Makes Perfect.

Lorraine's Reason. Lorraine has wonderful, lustrous eyes. Clear as the depth of a mountain lake, Blue as the blue of morning skies, That frost and sunshine together make. "Give me those beautiful eyes," I said, "Those merry blue eyes of yours, Lorraine." The sunbeams danced on the golden head, While into the eyes crept a look of pain. "I tan't!" the little maid said at last, Her mind all free from the sudden doubt, As over the lids her finger passed, "Died put 'em in tigh, and I tan't det 'em out."

FOR PLEASURE TRIPS.

WHAT THE VARIOUS RAILROADS HAVE TO OFFER.

Why Will Ye Swelter? Yes, "swelter" is the word—the only term to express the condition of humanity withering under the scorching city heat. Why do you endure it, while the pine-clad peaks of the White Mountains rear aloft into clear, cool, invigorating atmosphere? Why do you suffer in the heated, dusty city, when the cool, sparkling waters nestle in the shadows of the Adirondacks and invite you to refreshment? Think of the swirling, swishing waters of the rushing St. Lawrence, with the shade of the Thousand Isles. Think of the bold bluffs of beautiful Mackinac Island with the cooling breezes from the icy waters of the lake. Think of the lovely islets of Les Cheneaux and the toothsome fish darting through the rapid waters. Think of the rest and the comforts and the pleasures, and fly—fly from the torrid city! You haven't your wings, perhaps, but you have that old friend, the Michigan Central, the famous old standby of the tourist, and it will fly for you, carrying you swiftly to regions of cool delight and unalloyed comfort. The hot weather is here to stay. Take the Michigan Central and fly from it. 8-6-2.
