ABOUT-PEOPLE..

The happiest and most blissful event of the week occurred at the home of Mrs. Rachel Damrow, 1514 B Street, Wednesday evening at which time Mr. Elmer E. Stevenson and Miss Kate E. Damrow were united in the holy bonds of wedlock. As the hour of nine approached the parlors were filled with relatives and intimate friends of the contracting parties. At exactly nine to the strain of the wedding march played by Miss Melick, the bride in a costume of crystal silk, on train descended the stairs on the arm of the worthy groom who was arrayed in conventional black. They were met at the foot of the stairway by Rev. O. A. Williams of the First Baptist church who conducted them to the parlor where amid flowers and friends he made them man and wife with an impressive but simple ceremony. Hearty congratulations were offered, after which a wedding supper was served. The happy couple at once repaired to their home, 1433 Q Street, which has been so splendidly fitted up with a view to their every comfort and pleasure. They were handsomely remembered by their friends, the presents being such as will not only be useful but ornamental in their new home. Among the guests from abroad were Mrs. August Richmond, Seward, Miss Hattie Jean Drew, La Mar, Iowa, and Mr. Putnam, Lead City, South Dakota. Mr. Stevenson is well and favorably known in the city, having been city treasurer for several years. By his manly and courteous bearing he has won the respect and esteem of a host of people not only in this city but all over the state. The bride has lived in Lincoln for a number of years, and is a young lady of culture and refinement, possessing every grace to make a home cheerful and attractive. Mrs. C. E. Yates, assisted by J. O. Phillips of Omaha, gave an unique party yesterday afternoon to a number of lady friends. On entering the parlor each guest was given a cardon which was printed "A Penny for your Thoughts," and to this card was attached a penny and a pencil. Examine the penny minutely and one finds the answer to the questions, some of which are, the name of a fruit the date; a place of worship—the temple; a part of a hill—the brow; a messenger—one scientist; the name of an animal—a hare. The lady answering the greatest number of questions received a prize. Mrs. Yates' credit as a hostess needs no comment, as her ability to entertain guests is thoroughly known among Lincoln people. Sorosis held their first meeting to re-organize for the season at the residence of Mrs. W. Q. Bell Monday afternoon. Several new members were elected and the general work for the year was arranged. The plan of work is much the same as last year. They will meet once in two weeks, and one member, acting as leader, will devote the time to the discussion of some live topic of her own selection. The leaders are chosen alphabetically and the work is arranged three months in advance. The ardor and enthusiasm of the old as well as the new members gives promise of a years work which will be not only a pleasure but also a benefit. The next meeting will be held October 17th at the home of Mrs. A. J. Sawyer, at which time she will discuss the silver question. Mr. and Mrs. Thacker and daughter, Myrtle, who have been visiting their relatives, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Scott, left Wednesday for a visit of several weeks in Denver after which they will be back in Lincoln. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Montgomery of New Lexington, O., who have also been visiting them, left Friday in company with Mr. and Mrs. Scott for several days in Hot Springs, S. D. Mr. Julius Spier of Chicago, formerly of Washington, Kans., has purchased the Nesbit stock of boots and shoes. Mr. Spier is a man of means, having several other stores throughout the west. He has decided to locate in Lincoln and will occupy one of the new residences corner Seventeenth and K streets, his family having already arrived in the city. The ladies of the First Baptist church tendered a reception to the students of the various colleges Tuesday evening at the residence of Rev. and Mrs. O. A. Williams. Over a hundred guests were present. With music and conversation the evening passed very quickly. Refreshments were served during the evening and a pleasant time had by all. Dr. and Mrs. C. F. Ladd entertained a pleasant theatre party at the Lansing Monday evening on which occasion "J. Lane" by Frohman's company was presented. The party consisted of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. A FINE PLAY. (Continued from first page.) William Morris: I liked his work, I adored his character, I admired the man. I wrote, asking for an interview which he kindly appointed at his hotel, Hotel Woodruff, which place has been his Chicago home for many years. I took with me a friend who is a fine stenographer and I went "prepared for war." We did not have it. We expected to learn his whole history. We did not do it. We were to be formal, business-like. "Was an impossibility. We decided we should ask him first one question. It was to be this, "Are you married?" He did not give us the chance. A murmured "Miss Bonnell, I believe," and then "Mrs. Morris will be in in a few moments." Alas! the day, so we thought, before she came, but when she came—whom should she prove to be but Cinders, delightful, refreshing Cinders, who defines "Fair-Adice" as "that place where two blokes were in clover and didn't know it and got thrown out for eatin' green apples." The same Cinders "who'd blowed if the potato they put on Billy's plate, when he came to peel it, wasn't i-c-e-c-r-e-a-m" and on hearing that said Billy refuses to eat night but ice cream, tears frantically from the room, shouting, "That boy'll c-e-a-l his innards." And here she was, her own pleasant, bright little self, and when we saw them together we were glad, and in our hearts congratulated the n both. How welcome they invade us; business was forgotten, mutual acquaintances discovered and for (I am ashamed to confess it) an hour and a half we were most charmingly entertained. William Morris is a noble man, a fine character off the stage as well as on. He makes up not at all on the stage, he is unassuming at home and as he sat there that morning two weeks ago, dressed in a handsome black suit talking to me on his coming in his eyes whenever they rested on his dainty bride; it was a positive pleasure to watch him. They have been married not quite a year, their anniversary occurring in October. They are the kind of professional people one likes to meet, after hearing of Beatrice Cameron's troubles and that Herbert Kealey beats his wife. People say all actors are alike. William Morris, with Mrs. William Morris at his side, proves that a lie. I intended to tell you of him as he is on the stage. Really I have told you when I tell you he is at home. He has been on the stage fifteen years. He must have started when he was ten or twelve years old, for he cannot be over twenty-seven, he looks not a day over twenty-five, but he may be thirty. I cannot tell and I forebore to ask. Good of me, wasn't it? His first stage experience was with the Boston Museum company, which company, by the way, first presented this play last April. He played with them for three years, after which his experience was varied, as during that time he traveled through not only California, but South America and the West Indies. For two years he was Madame Modjeska's leading man, and since then has been with Frohman. He is an actor with a personality peculiar to himself. He has the sympathy, the admiration of every woman in the audience from the moment he first makes his appearance. He has personal magnetism and speaking of that quality Bab has said, "There is another who has it and has it most when he is perfectly still. (Perhaps you don't know him, but you are foolish if you don't go and see him some time) and that is a man named William Morris, who played in "Men and Women" last year and fought with the devil in silence five minutes, and during that five minutes every woman in the audience was helping him to get out of his trouble and gave a great sigh of satisfaction when he lied most artistically." I have not Bab's genius, I have no genius in fact, but in my own way I wish to pay my tribute to handsome William Morris and his charming wife. They treated me splendidly and it was with regret that I left them. Before I left Mr. Morris gave me his picture and Mrs. Morris gave me hers across the front of each is written in their own handwriting, "To Miss Bonnell, with my best wishes," and then their autographs. I shall prize those pictures and some day soon when Mr. Morris and his petite wife shall be the two actors of the land I shall be proud of the pictures even as I am now. I wanted to get their pictures half-toned and show what they are like better than I can tell you, but my getting into Chicago so late prevent my so doing in time for this letter. Perhaps next week I may have them. Etta Hawkins (or Mrs. Morris) is a St. Paul girl and as their vacations are spent there usually I may some day have the pleasure of repaying them for their charming courtesy to me by entertaining them at my own home in the saintly city. I hope I may. And now Mr. and Mrs. Morris farewell for the time being, or rather au revoir, though I write of others you are not forgotten. We enjoyed a visit with Mr. Reese last week, he going farther east Sunday night. He finishes his law studies in the spring of '93 at Ann Arbor. Frank Russell is back once more at his work at McCormick, and Gate late enrolls his name on the lists of the Chicago University. Mrs. W. R. Dennis has been for a short time my guest, and it is a matter of regret that I cannot keep her here all winter. As soon as her present course of music is finished she expects to return to Lincoln. Her progress in music, particularly her vocal work, has been very great indeed, and she should be flattered by her success. She entertained Dr. and Mrs. Bailey at the theatre, world's fair, etc., during their visit here. At present she is very happily located in the house of Mr. and Mrs. John Hoffman on the north side, where she will be for several weeks. I see that Mr. Wessel refers to me as the "unsuspected." He did that before he saw the size of this letter, for I know he suspects me now—of trying to decrease his circulation by sending such a portentous document. Pardon and I'll not transgress again, for alas! I cannot write every week of William Morris. But I am going to tell you soon about the new Schiller theatre which, thanks to Mr. Morris' courtesy, I expect soon to visit. Well, I'm done, Yours, CHICAGO. P. S.—No, I'm not, either. I must say to Mrs. Maxwell: My name is Bonnell for at least a limited length of time.
