 Entered at the postoffice at Lincoln, Neb., as second class matter.

THE FEBRUARY MAGAZINES.

There will appear in the North American Review for February, under the title of "Hoops and Bones of Free Coinage," three articles: the first, by Hon. R. P. Bland, will be entitled "In the Interest of Skylock"; the second will be by John Hanson Rhoades, president of the Greenwich Savings bank, who is to write "A Warning to Savings Bank Depositors"; and the third, by a depositor in a savings bank, who will consider the question from "A Depositor's Point of View." These subjects will be the more interesting to Lincolnites since the recent bank failure here.

Admirers and enemies of Mr. Blaine will alike be interested in the very complete article which appears in the February Cosmopolitan, reviewing his characteristics as a man and statesman. A number of fine portraits are printed with the article. Julian Hawthorne never more distinctly showed himself to be the son of his distinguished father than in the very bright bit of fancy which appears in this number. "June, 1893," ninety years after the invention of successful aerial machinery, is sketched in a witty and philosophical way.

Mr. Reginald de Kroyen, the composer of "Robin Hood" and other comic operas, who is now attracting so much attention in the musical world, has written his first set of independent waltzes, which the Ladies' Home Journal will publish in its February issue.

Among the score of other good things in the February Atlantic: Travel is represented by Mrs. Wiggins' clever sketches, "Penelope's English Experiences," and her sarcasms on English lodgings and English itemized bills are specially amusing. Two more papers of the same class are "Under the Far-West Greenwood Tree" and "The English Cambridge in Winter."

Lippincott's of February will contain "The First Flight," by Julian Gordon, a complete story that deals satirically with our ambitious daughter of wealthy parents, not quite "to the weather born" socially. It is handsomely illustrated. Herman Wolff also gives a vivid account of "Mesty" in the athletic series.

The opening article in the February Scribner is "From Venice to the Cross-Venodeyer," an ably written, thoroughly interesting work from the pen of Henry van Dyke. "A Regular Trainer" is the subject of a beautiful frontispiece, drawn by A. B. Frost, being an illustration from Harry Lossing's "Stories of a Western Town." The illustrations are particularly excellent and there are several very clever articles in this issue. Among the contributors are: Marquis de Chambrun, T. R. Sullivan, Alfred Jerome Weston, Louis Chandler Moulton, and Frances Hodgson Burnett.

The New City Directory.

Lincoln's new city directory for 1893 is now being delivered to subscribers. It is a thorough creditable piece of work, more compact than previous issues and the easier to handle. It contains several thousand additional names and typographically is as neat a book as has ever been issued in the city. The binding is of cloth with russet leather back and gold lettering. The compiling has been carefully attended to and as a whole the work has been very satisfactorily done. Parties that have not secured a copy of the book may yet secure one by calling at Clason & Fletcher's, 1120 O street.

The Testimonials.

TALK OF THE TOWN

The Washington Star of the 13th inst. prints a very accurate and life-like picture of the Hon. G. M. Lambertson of this city, who succeeded Gen. A. B. Nettleton as assistant secretary of the United States treasury. Those who know Mr. Lambertson and have studied and admired the unaccountable ins and outs of his features will readily conclude that his picture, printed alone in a prominent position, must have led to a sale of papers that day that created quite a stir among Washington newshoys. But, seriously, those who know Mr. Lambertson best can find in his features a great deal to admire, although they are not modeled upon the pattern most approved among superficial observers. No one can study his face for a moment without discovering the outward evidences of a deep intellectuality. The expression upon his face is always one of kindness and thoughtfulness. He is one of the few men one meets into whose eyes an observer can look and seem to fathom his thoughts. One can easily imagine that his thoughts are reflected in his eyes, especially when he is engaged in the trial of some great lawsuit.

The picture is accompanied by an extended sketch of his professional life concluding with the statement: "He is a man of commanding appearance, being over six feet in height, but very gentle and pleasing in his manners. He is already very popular in the department and will undoubtedly prove a valuable aid to Secretary Foster in the administration of its important and complicated functions." In detailing his professional work the paper gives among other interesting facts the following: "He has had a number of cases before the interstate commerce commission and in July, 1890, he argued before that commission on behalf of the farmers' alliance of the state of Nebraska through the authority of the governor, the question of reducing the rates on corn and other products transported from the state of Nebraska to the seaboard. His argument in that case was printed and widely circulated. Subsequently he acted as attorney for the interstate commerce commission at Chicago in connection with the violation of the interstate commerce law. Out of this arose the somewhat noted Counselman case, which Mr. Lambertson argued in the Supreme Court of the United States, and which was decided by that court about a year ago. Subsequently the president was strongly urged to appoint Mr. Lambertson as a member of the interstate commerce commission at the time that Commissioner McMill received his appointment."

The sketch concludes: "His friends tell a good story in connection with his advent into public life. He was a delegate to a republican congressional convention, and as a special compliment to his oratorical powers was chosen to put in nomination the name of Judge Lorenzo Crouse. Standing in his place, he launched forth in the most eloquent terms in laudation of the man whose selection to a seat in the national legislature, he said, would not only reflect unbounded credit upon the state, but would also add such a decided luster to the country's diadem that it would fairly dazzle the other nations of the world. He soared way above the empyrean heights and metaphorically brushed the cobwebs from the skies, but tantalizingly withheld the name of his ideal candidate. That was to be the climax of his peroration. It was a long address and some of the delegates became impatient. One of the men, who was waiting to put in a nomination and was not fully aware of Mr. Lambertson's position, finally turned to one of his colleagues and said: 'Who in thunder is that fellow talking about, anyhow?' 'Well, I don't know,' was the measured response, 'but judging from his remarks I think he is going to nominate the Holy Savior. I don't know of any one else whose virtues meet Lambertson's vivid description.' Notwithstanding these irreverent comments on the speech, Crouse was nominated by the convention and was duly elected. Some ill-informed people say this was accomplished in spite of Lambertson's speech. A coincidence in the case is that Judge Crouse, who is now governor of Nebraska, resigned the office of assistant secretary of the treasury a few months only before Mr. Lambertson was appointed to his present position."

The board of education has astonished the public by the adoption of a resolution to close the public schools in April, thereby cutting the school year two months short. It bases its action on the shortness of funds. The board will undoubtedly think better of this proposition when it hears more of the wishes of the public. Those who are familiar with the subject assert that funds could easily be secured to tide the board over any possible embarrassment threatened by lack of funds, and if so it should spare no pains to keep the schools in operation to the close of the year. True the board is subjected to some irksome restrictions by reason of the fact that the city council is by law given the power to cut down the annual school levy, a power which it utilizes entirely too freely, but as long as the board can borrow money or float warrants that fact will not saddle upon the council responsibility for closing the schools half as readily as it would saddle upon it responsibility for any necessary indebtedness contracted. It is to be hoped that the school board will continue the schools to the limit of the year.

John C. Watson is evidently in earnest in advocating a measure to provide for the health of prisoners by requiring the raising of jail floors above the surface of the ground. This is designed to do away with that relic of feudal cruelty, the stone floor of the dungeon, and is not, as might be supposed, with the design of assisting prisoners to escape. He has made the law apply only to counties having more than 25,000 inhabitants, as it is palpably so much more unhealthy for a prisoner in a big county to sleep on a ground floor than it is in a small and sparsely settled county.

If you know of anything that will interest the ladies, write it on a postal card and address it to "THE COURIER, City." Society news, personals, and all kinds of news notes that are of interest to the fair sex are always welcome at this office and thankfully received. If you have not time to write stop in when passing the office (now located at 1134 O street) or call up telephone 233 and give us the news in that manner. Dozens of ladies assist us every week in this way and we certainly appreciate it. Why can't we hear from you as well.

Director Irvine has his hands pretty well filled these days. Besides filling numerous engagements with his fine orchestra, he has been engaged by the Western Normal College to take charge of all instructions on orchestral and band instruments. He has, therefore, resigned his position at the Lincoln College of Music.

Readers of the COURIER are again reminded that the business office is no longer on N street but is now located at 1134 O street, occupying the front east half of Mr. S. E. Moore's wall paper store where all business for the paper is transacted. The telephone number, same as for past eight years, remains the same—233.

LIGHT INFANTRY TOPICS.

This department is becoming of general interest to the L. L. boys and the public as well, and as it is to be a regular feature of the COURIER it is to be hoped that every member of the company will add his name to the subscription list of this paper. Mr. Wessel extends us the free use of this space each week wherein to publish notices, items of news, etc., and the least appreciation that each of the boys can show would be for every man to subscribe. Over half of the boys are already on the list—are you? Drop Wessel a card, stop at the office, 1134 O street, or call up phone 233.

Those in charge of the minstrel show have been requested by a great many to repeat it but for the present they have decided to let the matter drop though no doubt they will within the next three months give it their attention and the show will again be put on with several changes and new features.

The first open drill of the company will be given next Friday. The company respectfully invites any one interested in such matters to be present. Hereafter the first regular drill night of each month will be open to the public.

Captain Campbell has purchased a dog that is more of a curiosity than St. John's goat. The dog can whistle. Chris Camp fooled around it one day not long ago and got bit—and he hasn't been near it since.

Many Lincoln people were surprised to learn that Tom Hickey could dance. Tom at one time was a member of a song and dance team known as Hickey and Ward, and traveled for two years with the old Duprez and Benedicts Minstrels.

Billy McClay has done more than any other member in the way of decorating the company headquarters. He is responsible for many of the nice pictures that adorn the walls of the headquarters.

Uniforms for twenty new members will be ordered immediately. This number, with the thirty-five already uniformed, will give the boys a fine appearance when next they appear in public.

Tom Callanan is a great man with the gloves. Since Tom's training for his act as one of the gladiators, not one of the members dare put them on with him.

The drill of next week will take place on Tuesday night instead of Monday, the hall being engaged for other purposes on Monday.

Rudy Rehlender is the latest applicant for membership, his name having been posted a few days ago.

Ladies will be interested in the show windows of the Bon Marche, 1236 O street.

Have You Anything to Trade for Hastings real estate? I have two blocks well located in Spencer Brow's Park addition and I will consider propositions to trade for almost anything. Address L. Wessel, Jr., care of COURIER.
