SUMMER FURNISHINGS.
LIGHT AND LUXURIOUS APPOINTMENTS FOR SUMMER USE.

The Possibilities of Rattan Furniture Described and Illustrated—Lightness, Elegance, Usefulness and Cheapness the Prime Merits of Such Belongings—Dainty Suggestions for Color Effects in Artistic Rugs and Draperies that are Cheap.

As a relief from the heavy and stuffy character of much of the regulation furniture constructed for dwellings, with the return of Spring visions of the summer cottage, so light and artistic rattan furniture, so light and luxurious, will rise before the eye. But why should rattan or reed furniture be used exclusively in summer cottages? Its usefulness is quite as proper, quite as fashionable in the city dwelling as in a cottage located on the sea shore, or in the mountains.

The manufacturers of rattan, reed, or wicker furniture have exerted themselves to the utmost to keep pace with the progress that is being made in wood furniture, and nothing more dainty or comfortable can be conceived than the many specialties produced nowadays in rattan or wicker fancy tables, settees, lounges, chairs of all varieties, workbaskets, music stands, tea tables, inlaid chairs, cosy corners, overmantles, not to mention arbors, summer houses, wicker baskets, hat stands, gong stands, newspaper racks, linen baskets, bassinets, window blinds,

The use of rattan furniture suggests a method of providing good things that are cheap, for a summer cottage. In the way of window draperies, cheese cloth can be purchased printed with the most beautiful designs. The material costs fifteen cents a yard when decorated.

For the first floor we may use a Japanese cotton rug, and a large-sized rug of this material will not cost more than $20.00. A cheap and effective rug is plain denim, which can be used wrong side up, with the edge turned over showing a white fold. This, when fastened to the floor and covered with rugs, forms a very refreshing carpet.

The interior illustrated, if it be a parlor having a southern aspect, may have a blue note of color predominating. The cheese cloth window draperies can be had with a pattern, say of passion flowers, in two shades of dark blue or an all over nasturtium leaf in blue outlines. The material may be trimmed and lined in plain white cotton. The floor can be covered with a Japanese white and blue rug, and the furniture upholstered in blue denim, with a white, or very pale blue design etched thereon.

In the case of a parlor having the wood-work in bird's eye maple, antique ivory would be the dominating color for the apartment. This effect can be very easily secured in rattan furniture which, by being simply shellaced, is the color of antique ivory. In such a case the walls may be papered or calomined in antique ivory, and the ceiling in a light ivory tint, the draperies being of a silvery grey tint.

A parlor decorated in green and old pink will be very suitable for rattan furniture, which can be purchased at ready decorated in an old pink enamel. In such a case the window curtains may be in cream scrim, with multicolored tassels. The walls may be wainscoted in pine, or a wainscoting may be very simply made of tea chest matting, with a railing of split bamboo running along the top, a very decorative process. Such of the chairs and the couch as are upholstered may have the cushions made up in green cotton plush, while the table cover is in old pink cotton plush. The floor may be entirely covered with cream china matting, one of the rugs thrown thereon, being green and another old pink, and by way of variety, a black fur rug will render a combination peculiarly attractive. The impression of such an apartment is fresh, dainty and nice. Persons interested in attractive and tasty furniture should not fail to examine the extensive stock of the A. M. Davis Co.

many of effect with rattan, both materials being of tropic growth. Lounges are furnished with cushions and tapestry for drapery, with fringe, the height of the seat with the cushions, being from 15 to 18 inches. Many of the chair seats are draped and cushioned with Oriental fabrics, thus producing novel and artistic effects.

Rattan furniture, besides being extremely artistic, has the great economic value of being easily redecorated and refinished, or enameled, without having to send it to the manufacturers for this purpose. Any lady can repaint her furniture with any of the ready-made enamel paints on the market, which are to be had in any color.

We show an illustration of a parlor with rattan furniture, selected from the display at the extensive warerooms of the A. M. Davis Co., successors to A. M. Davis & Son and Hardy & Pitcher, 1112 O street and 211 south 11th street.

There are shown two arm chairs of very graceful design and a table. The lounge like the other articles, is in natural rattan, with cushions and tapestry, having a fringe.

There is also an illustration of the grandfather chair, with side wings and cushions and tapestry, and a fine design of a settee, about four feet in length, having seat and back cushions and tapestry. These designs show at a glance the varied artistic use of cane goods, which would be very cool and effective for summer use.

There is no reason, in fact, why cane should not become permanently used in every household, seeing that it combines lightness, elegance, usefulness and cheapness.
