THE MAN WITH A WIFE

Do you see the man?
I do see the man.
Who is it with him?
It is his wife.
So he is married?
Yes.
Happily?
Average.
How is that?
Well, sometimes he is glad he is married, and sometimes he wishes he wasn't.
Are all husbands so?
Most of them.
Always?
Oh, no; the first year never, and then, again, when they are quite old.
Why in the first year?
Novelty.
And latterly?
No, unless you're the few remaining years.
Taking it big and large, however, they rather prefer the married state, don't they?
Yes.
Why can't they make it happy all the time?
Sometimes they don't care to; their wives won't let them sometimes, and, besides, it isn't human nature to be happy all the time.
They would have been unhappy as bachelors?
Certainly.
This man doesn't seem to be very attentive to his wife?
No; she doesn't expect it.
Why not?
Custom.
Custom?
Yes; nobody does that. People would laugh if he was as devoted as he was when he was courting her.
Would he care for that?
It isn't pleasant to be ridiculed.
What does she think about it?
Pretty much as he does.
She likes those smaller courtesies of men to women, doesn't she?
Yes, but she would rather not have them than to be the subject of comment.
Who makes such comments?
Mostly persons not as happy as the average.
Are there enough of them to count?
It appears so.
Isn't there some other reason besides that?
Possibly.
Men and women, as husbands and wives, get a little tired of each other, don't they?
Enough to make love-like attentions rather oppressive.

Does this man have a club?
Yes.
Does he go to it?
Yes, he finds it pleasant there sometimes.
And how about business?
He finds business engagements occasionally interfere with engagements with his wife.
Did he find it so before he married her?
Not often.
And he could forego the pressure of the club also in the courtship days?
His friends at the club say so.
She knows about it doesn't she?
Oh, yes; they've talked it over many a time.
What does she think of it?
She only laughs.
Takes it as a matter of course?
Yes.
Quite satisfied?
No; but submissive.
He is kind to her?
Yes, gives her lots of nice things, thinks a lot of her, and all that.
Still he is not as in the courtship time?
Hardly.
Does he like to talk to her?
Oh, yes, but they don't sit up talking until the milkman comes around in the morning as they used to do.
He doesn't spruce up in his appearance for her as he used to either, does he?
Yes, when she scolds him for being careless in his attire.
Is he a good provider?
Very.
Does he growl when she wants money?
Only occasionally.
Some husbands do, don't they?
That is the general impression.
Don't their wives say so?
They do, indeed.
A man should trust his wife in respect of those things, shouldn't he?
He shouldn't have married her unless he was willing to trust her in all things.
There should be perfect confidence between them, then?
Absolute.
Is it so with this man?
He thinks it expedient to do a little concealing at times.
Is it for the best?
Theoretically, no; practically, yes.
Another case of ignorance being bliss?
Yes.
A wife has no right to be over inquisitive, has she?
Of course not.
A man has, though?
Of course.
And still the twain is one flesh?
Legally or spiritually or morally, as you please.
Would this man marry again if his wife should die?

Probably.
Would his courtship of the second be anything like his courtship of the first?
Very similar.
Experience makes no difference?
Not at all; he will promise anything.
What of fulfillment?
That's another thing.
There is evidently a wide difference between the wife and the sweetheart?
More than there should be.
Women know it, don't they?
Yes, but a woman can come very near being a fool at times.
And the man?
He's more fool than knave also.
He means well?
Always.
Why doesn't he live up to his intentions?
It's hard work to be nice all the time.
Does he love the woman any less?
I fancy not; it is only man's way.
Which are the most devoted husbands?
Those who love their wives more than their wives love them.
Don't husbands and wives love equally?
One time in a million, possibly.
How is that?
Nobody knows; the fact exists, though, that the preponderance of affection is to the one side or other, and that side on which it is ever the active side.
What is the cause?
At a guess it might be said that one love never quite felt that its object had been fully won, and it continued its efforts.
How is it with this husband?
Judging by his indifference, so to say, it might be concluded that the wife loved him a degree or two the more.
He could impose on her, then, if he felt so disposed?
Very easily.
And does he?
It would only be human.
Would the wife do the same if the case were reversed?
Of a surety.
There's a good deal of six of one and half a dozen of the other in this marriage business, isn't there?
There is, indeed.
Will it ever be different?
Never.
Is this husband jealous?
No; he leaves that to his wife.
Is she?
Yes, more or less.
Why?
She is not as certain of him as he is of her.
Do women like jealous husbands?
They say not.
Would most women be satisfied with such a husband as this one seems to be?
Ask them.

PARENTAL ADVICE.
Feelin' streakid, ain't ye, Johnny?
Wall, this is the way I view it, that the gals would like to love ye, but you've got to make 'em do it.
Don't go brownin' at a distance
In some pastur' way off yonder, Don't believe what idiots tell ye—
"Absence makes the heart grow fonder."
Stop up to 'em, Johnny, smarter; Sorry Kate give you the mitten; She'd said, "Yes," as sure as gospel
If you hadn't been such a kitten, You will learn to view this matter Bimeby jest the way I view it, That the gals would like to love ye, But you've got to make 'em do it.
Everybody's bound to have 'em All, at any rate, but few are; An 'w'en I was young an lively I was jest about as you are, An I went an popped it to her, Skeeered completely out of natur', Tremblin like a frightened rabbit, Blushin like a red termater, After she had told me "No, sir," I was jest about as you be, Goin' round limp an kinder dunplah, Feelin like a blasted booby, But I fin'ly spunked up courage Like a man to go an win her, An she's been a blessin to me; I can't say a word agin her!
"Did I get her?" Now you're crazy Do you s'pose I'd get another W'en I loved the gal like I did? Go an ask her, she's yer mother. Since that time I tell the youngsters Jest the way I allus view it, That the gals would like to love 'em, But they've got to make 'em do it.

The betting is 2 to 1 on Griffo against Lavigne, and may go 3 to 1 on account of the heavy moneyed interests behind the Australian.
Another decision has been rendered in Philadelphia on the question of boxing. Even sparing exhibitions are prohibited there hereafter, and the promoters are trying to work up interest in wrestling.
Eddy Foy and Joe Donof, the comedians, claim that Griffo can whip any of the present American lightweights. Donof, who himself is a stout boxer, had the gloves on with Griffo in a try-out and says he wants no more of it.
The challenge issued in Chicago by Jimmy Carrol, backer of Jimmy Whalen, to fight any 133-pound man in the world except Jack McAuliffe, for $1,000 aside has been accepted. John Considine sent word that he would accept the challenge for Spider Kelly, the fight to take place before the club offering the largest purse.
Jack Dempsey, after a stay in Chicago of one week, left for New York Sunday and will at once go into training for his contest with Dick Burge, of England. Dempsey is very much annoyed about the reports sent out as to his mentality and claims that it is the work of enemies who are trying to curtail his chances for getting on a match.

Gentlemen—I have been a victim of rheumatism for several years past. I have suffered intensely at times, and have gone to the Hot Springs of South Dakota and the Hot Springs of Arkansas five times seeking relief. I have also taken much medicine under the directions of able physicians. About one month ago I suffered from one of the most violent attacks of the disease and at once began taking hot salt water baths at your new and splendid bath house in this city. Under the care of your gentlemanly and efficient attendant, Mr. Henry Shmutte, I have, I think, entirely recovered.
From experience and my observation of the results of treatment of many patients at the hot springs above named and at your bath house, I am convinced that better and quicker results can be obtained by a course of hot salt water baths at your bath house than at any other place in the country.
I do not hesitate not only to recommend, but to urge every person suffering from rheumatism to try a course of baths at your bath house under the care of one of the physicians in charge.
I believe your new and magnificent bath house will prove a great blessing to the many victims of rheumatism in this vicinity, and I hope it will receive the liberal patronage it merits.
You have not requested of me any testimonial, but I deem it proper that I should acknowledge the great relief I have received at your hands, and you may use what I have said in such manner as you may deem proper.
Very respectfully,
J. B. STRODE

There is more catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer $100 for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address,

Many people, not aware of the dangers of constipation, neglect the proper remedy till the habit becomes chronic, or inflammation or stoppage results. A dose or two of Ayer's Pills in the beginning would have prevented all this.
