

SCARRED DUELING HEROES.

St. Louis Citizens Who Have Figured in College Contests.

The account of the world-famous sword contests as practiced among the German students of the fatherland, published in yesterday's Globe-Democrat was a theme for much discussion yesterday, and in many places of resort throughout the city, in the beer gardens, and wherever Germans might be seen, little groups of men discussed the story of the fight, beguiling the idleness of a summer Sunday with reminiscences stirred to a recollection by the allusion to a warfare in which many of them had at one time taken part.

Those who have contracted chests, especially persons who have had pleurisy and retain adhesions of the lungs, do not sleep well on the back. Nearly all who are inclined to snore do so in that position because the soft palate and uvula hang on the tongue, and that organ falls back so as to partly close the top of the windpipe.

It is better, therefore, to lie on the side, and in the absence of special diseases rendering it desirable to lie on the weak side, so as to leave the healthy lung free to expand, it is well to use the right side, because when the body is thus placed the food gravitates more easily out of the stomach into the intestines, and the weight of the stomach does not compress the upper portion of the intestines.

A glance at any plate of the visceral anatomy will show how this must be. Many persons are deaf in one ear and prefer to lie on a particular side; but, if possible, the right side should be chosen. Again, sleeping with the arms thrown over the head is to be deprecated; but this position is often assumed during sleep, because circulation is then free in the extremities, and the head and neck and muscles of the chest are drawn up and fixed by the shoulders, and thus the expansion of the thorax is easy.

The chief objection to these positions are that they create a tendency to cramp and cold in the arms, and sometimes seem to cause headaches during sleep and dreams. These small matters often make or mar comfort in sleeping.

Curious Chinese Advertisements. THE North China Herald gives one or two very curious specimens of the advertisements which appear in the Chinese papers. One is from a mother to her son, who has run away from home, and it is worded as follows: "Take care that you are not struck by lightning. Your mother weeps bitterly for you as she pens these lines in order that they may be read by her son. When you run away from home on the 30th of the eighth moon the people of the shop came and asked us what had become of you. It was thus that we learned your flight. I nearly died of fright, and since then my food and sleep have benefited me but little. I am still crying and moaning. I have received your letter which has come from behind the horizon, but it does not tell me where I can find you. I am now at almost the last extremity, and our family has had to put up with cruel insults from strangers. If you do not return I can stand all this no longer and shall assuredly put an end to my existence, in which case you would be in danger of being struck down by lightning. If you return, no matter in what way, all will be arranged. I have even invented a plan by which your father will know nothing about your escapade. My life or death is a question of only a few more days. I entreat all well disposed persons to spread abroad the advertisement so that it may be read by all whom it may concern. They will thus earn a profusion of hidden merit. Written by a woman of Son-cho. Take care that you are not struck down by lightning!"

Victoria to Cleveland. Washington, D. C., Aug. 16.—The following letter has been received by the president, from Queen Victoria, in response to a letter from the former, congratulating her on the occasion of her recent jubilee: Windsor Castle, July 18, 1887.—[Victoria, by the grace of God Queen of Great Britain and Ireland, defender of the faith and Empress of India to the President of the United States of America.]—Greeting: Our good friend, we have received from the hands of Mr. Phelps, United States minister at our court, the letter which you addressed to us, on the 26th of May last, and in which you convey your congratulations and those of the people of the United States on the occasion of the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of our ascension to the throne. We request you to accept our best thanks for this proof of friendship and good will, which with the similar proofs we have received from the rulers and peoples of other states has caused us most sincere gratification.

In thanking you also for the choice which you have made of Mr. Phelps to be the interpreter of your sentiments on this occasion we request you to accept in return our best wishes for your own uninterrupted happiness and welfare, and for the prosperity of the United States, and so we recommend to the protection of the Almighty. Given at our court at Windsor castle, this 18th day of July in the year 1887, and the fifty-first year of our reign. Your good friend Victoria.

Positions that Affect Sleep. According to Dr. Grayville the position affects sleep. A constrained position generally prevents repose, while a comfortable one woos sleep. He says: Lying flat on the back, with the limbs relaxed, would seem to secure the greatest amount of rest for the muscular system. This is the position assumed in the most exhausting diseases, and it is generally hailed as a token of revival when a patient voluntarily turns on the side; but

Her Darter Partheny.

A tall, well-complexioned old lady, accompanied by a phenominal and prepossessing daughter, recently walked into an Austin photograph gallery. "Be you the photographic man?" she inquired.

"Yes, ma'am," replied the artist in plate-glass and chemicals. "Can I do anything for you?" "No, I reckon not. I'm too far over the border for you to waste any of your mechanical genius on me. It's my darter, Partheny, here that I want tuck. Can't yer sorter nitergate that complexion of her and build up that nose that was broke by fallin' outer a winder?"

"I think I can," replied the artist. "I've seen pictures of dread loads of our relations, an' I've always noticed that the pictures flattered them mightily. I know enough about the biz to recognize that you have got everything in your own hands. You kin make a woman like a jimplocote of the first-war or a Mrs. Langtry, just as yer please. Say can't yer take in Partheny's ears a few so she won't look so much like a male rabbit?"

"There will be no difficulty in that." "How about that air squint in her left eye?" "I can touch it up with India ink."

"What partiklar pose do yer think best for Partheny's style of beauty, full circus or a sideshow?" "You mean quarter view or profile." "I guess I do. You see the photograph is goin' to a young feller what put an advertisement in the paper for correspondents an' Partheny's writin' to him. Now you see, it won't hurt for the picture to sorter nitergate her little blemishes. You'll do the fair thing by Partheny, won't yer?"

"Certainly, madame, I'll do my best." "Well, all right then. Just go ahead and square them shoulders back a trifle and bring the nose down fine, wipe off them freckles, an' tone down her 'ears—an' the hair! It won't be red in the picture, will it?" "O, no, there will be no color shown but black."

"That's a comfort! Gracious! Partheny, what would that young man think if you sent him an oil paintin' taken from life? Kin I stay in the room?" "O, yes." "All right. Strike an attitude, Partheny, that won't give yer away, an' we'll rope in that young man as sure as you're a foot high."

Sykes' Dog. Ben. Perley Poor in the Boston Budget, When Mr. Lincoln heard of the scattering of the confederates under Hood by Gen. Thomas he was reminded of the following anecdote: "Out of lower Illinois, in a little village, there was a butcher named Sykes, who had a large, wicked, mischievous bulldog, which was regarded as a town nuisance. Fowl were killed, clothes were pulled from the lines, meathouses were robbed, children were cared, and Sykes' dog was blamed for all and blamed justly. Now, there was a man named Henderson, who had a fine turkey killed by this dog of Sykes', and he swore revenge. So he took about a quarter of a pound of powder and did it up in a piece of buckskin, tying up a piece of punk so that it projected out of the little bundle in a large piece of corn bread, and had it in readiness. It was not long before Sykes' dog came trotting along, and Henderson, lighting the punk with his cigar, threw the bit of bread to the cur, who gobbled it at a mouthful. The next minute there was an explosion. The dog's head was blown over the fence into the creek, his hind legs and tail were sent up and lodged in Henderson's porch, his forelegs were thrown across the street, and the rest of the bow-wow was laid about in small pieces. 'Whorra!' exclaimed a looker-on, 'you've rather used up Sykes' dog, hain't ye, Henderson?' 'Yes,' replied Henderson. 'I rather think that as a dog Sykes won't find him of much use.' And so of the rebel army," added Lincoln, with one of his sad smiles, "as an army Hood won't find it of much use."

Punch's First Editor Dead. So Henry Mayhew is dead, the first editor of Punch, though only for a brief while. He is the last of the little band who, on the 17th of July, 1841, produced the comic journal which has now become almost a necessity in an educated Englishman's life. John Leech is dead; Mark Lemon, who succeeded Mayhew, is dead; Douglas Jerrold is gone; Richard Doyle, who designed the wrapper, has been beneath the daisies these four years; and the literary men and artists who helped to make the paper acceptable to the public, from Thackeray to a Beckett, are men of the past generation. For forty-six years now Punch has been in existence, Mayhew was perhaps more responsible for its establishment than anybody else, and the lines upon which he founded it are the same as those upon which it is at present conducted.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harrisburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well."

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c per box by F. G. Fricke, & Co. (5)

He Knew Who Was Boss.

A youngster in a neighboring town, who had gone out on a pleasure trip by his father's consent, suddenly broke out crying, and when asked what the matter was, said: "Mamma will whip me. An effort was made to soothe him by explaining that as long as his father knew he had come his mother would not scold him for coming without saying anything about it. This hardly satisfied the little fellow, who whispered in reply: "Papa isn't the boss."

Don't Experiment.

You cannot afford to waste time in experimenting when your lungs are in danger. Consumption always seems, at first, only a cold. Do not permit any dealer to impose upon you with some cheap imitation of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, but be sure you get the genuine. Because he can make more profit he may tell you he has something just as good, or just the same. Don't be deceived, but insist upon getting Dr. King's New Discovery, which is guaranteed to give relief in all Throat ailing and Chest affections. Trial bottles free at F. G. Fricke & Co.'s drug store. (6)

Settle's Electric Miner's Lamp.

Mr. Settle, the patentee of the water cartridge by means of which dynamite is exploded harmlessly in fiery gas or in the heart of a barrel of gunpowder, is managing director of the Madeley Canal and Iron company, in Stafford. His inventive skill has been applied successfully to the illumination, by electricity, of the mines under his control, so that the miners do not even require hand lamps in their operations. One of the seams of coal, three feet in thickness, is worked at a depth of 400 yards from the surface, and the wires are supplied with a current from an upper level 325 yards deep. Permanent lamps of 16-candle power are fixed throughout the workings and 90 feet apart. The small globe of glass which incloses the incandescent film is surrounded by a larger globe filled with water. The illuminant glass floats in this, and it is only when the globe is full of water that contact is established and light produced. As a matter of course, when the glass is broken contact ceases, and the water prevents possibility of an explosion, complete extinction being instantaneous. These lamps are not affected by air currents. In some of the pits electric lights are used in every part of the workings. Mr. Settle is also the inventor of an electric hand lamp, in which the same principle of safety is carried out by means of another globe filled with carbonic acid gas. On breaking the outer globe the light instantly disappears.

—We would be pleased to know of a man or woman who has never had headache or been subject to constipation. As these seem to be universal troubles a little advice may be in order. Why should persons cram their stomachs with nauseating purgative pills etc. which sicken and debilitate when such a pleasant and sterling remedy as Prickly Ash Bitters will act mildly and effectively on the liver, kidney, stomach and bowels, and at the same time tone up and strengthen the whole system, causing headache, constipation and all such distressing evils to quickly disappear. 20-m

How Miss Wolfe Moved Two Trees

There are two trees in the grounds at Vineland which were brought from the country seat of Miss Wolfe's father's coming up on the Hudson. "Can it be done?" she asked of the landscape gardener who had undertaken to make her domains what they ought to be in the matter of trees and shrubs. She referred to the transplanting. The landscape gardener was astonished. "Pray, madam," said he, hesitatingly, "have you considered the enormous expense of carrying out such a whim? It would cost at least"—

His questioner broke in impatiently: "That has nothing to do with it," she said. "I did not ask you what it would cost, but if it could be done. I repeat, is it possible?" "Yes," answered the landscape maker, "it is possible."

"Do it then," ordered the lady, "and let the expense be what it may. I want those trees in Newport." And the trees came to Newport. They were taken up carefully, laid upon canal boats, carried down the Hudson, and along the sound, making the entire journey by water. What must have been the astonishment of the sailors who saw the remarkable spectacle of what looked like a forest moving on the face of the deep, Dame Gossip said not. It was only a modern instance of Birman wood and Dunsinane. But the operation was successful. The much traveled trees are flourishing with great vigor in Rhode Island soil, and never seemed a bit the worse for their long and remarkable journey, which cost about $1,500.—Newport Letter in the Boston Herald.

FOR MAN AND BEAST! Mexican Mustang Liniment

- Scalds, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Burns, Scalds, Stings, Bites, Bruises, Bunions, Corns, Sprains, Strains, Stiff Joints, Backache, Galls, Sores, Spavin, Cracks, Contracted Muscles, Eruptions, Hoof Ail, Scrow, Worms, Swinney, Saddle Galls, Piles.

THIS GOOD OLD STAND-BY accomplishes for everybody exactly what is claimed for it. One of the reasons for the great popularity of the Mustang Liniment is found in its universal applicability. Everybody needs such a medicine. The Housewife needs it in case of accident. The Laborer needs it for general family use. The Mechanic needs it for his hands and his work bench. The Miner needs it in case of emergency. The Planter needs it—can't get along without it. The Farmer needs it in his house, his stable, and his stock yard.

The Squire needs it and the Boatman needs it in liberal supply afloat and ashore. The Horse-fancier needs it—it is his best friend and safest reliance. The Stock-grower needs it—it will save him thousands of dollars and a world of trouble. The Railroad man needs it and will need it so long as his life is a round of accidents and dangers. The Backwoodsman needs it. There is nothing like it as an antidote for the dangers to life, limb and comfort which surround the pioneer. The Merchant needs it about his store among his employees. Accidents will happen, and when these come the Mustang Liniment is wanted at once. Keep a Bottle in the House. 'Tis the best of economy. Keep a Bottle in the Factory, its immediate use in case of accident saves pain and loss of wages. Keep a Bottle Always in the Stable for use when wanted.
