TO ROBIN GOODFELLOW.

I see you, Maister Bawsy-brown, Through yonder lattice creepin You come for cream and to gae me dream, But you dinna find me sleepin'. The moonbeam that upon the floor Wi' crickets been a-finkin', Now steals away fra' her bonnie play-Wi' a roster bile, I'm thinkin'.

I saw you, Malster Bawsy-brown, When the bluebells went a-ringin' For the merrie fays o' the banks an' braes And I kenned your bonnie singin', The gowans gave you honey sweets, And the posies on the heather Dript draughts o' dew for the facry crew That danct and sang together.

But posle bloom an' simmer dew And ither sweets o' facry Cud na gae down wi' Bawsy-brown, Sae nigh to Maggie's dairy! My pantry shelves, sae clean and white, Are set wi' cream and cheeses-Gas, gin you will, an' take your fill Of whatsoever pleases

Then wave your wand aboon my een Until I close a-wearis, And the night be past sae sweet and fast Wi' dreamings o' my dearle. But pinch the weach in yonder room, For she's na good nor bonni Her sleeves be dust and her pans be rust, And she winkit at my Johnnie!

Beauty of Baltimore Girls.

The beauty of Baltimore girls is due to the purity of their stock, and to the conditions of life in their pleasant old city. They lead comfortable lives, with a plenty of recreation and excellent food. As a class they are remarkably independent, and are fond of the open air. They ride well, walk a great deal, play lawn tennis from spring until late autumn, and dance clear through the programme. As a consequence they are well developed, have good color, good forms and good muscles. There are fewer great beauties in Baltimore than there used to be, but the crop of girls who are pretty and bright shows no diminution, and the year's debutantes of the coming season will more than sustain the fame of their sex.—Baltimore Cor. Detroit Free Press.

The Editor's "Blue Pencil."

Editors commonly use a blue pencil in editing copy, because the marks it makes are clear and easily distinguishable. The easiest mark to make with a blue pencil is a double X, cutting out from the manuscript a superfluous paragraph or page. For this reason the blue pencil has come to mean something that writers dread. Further than this the color of the lead in the pencils editors use has no significance whatever. Some writers seem to have an idea that editors have a series of peculiar symbols, used in marking manuscripts, which are generally understood by other editors, and which prejudice their judg ment. Those who are posted know that her without founda Passengers' Baggage in England. In the matter of handling passengers' baggage on railways there has been marked improvement in England since the writer's last visit, three years ago. Sights Underneath the Ocean.

At a recent meeting of the National Academy of Sciences in New York, Profes-Academy of Sciences in New York, Professor A. E. Verrill, of Yale college, described the physical and geological character of the sea bottom off our coast, especially that which lies beneath the Gulf Stream: "The depths of the ocean teem with life. Sharks are seen by thousands, and countless dolphins; but it seems strange that not a fishbone is ever dredged by A not a fishbone is ever dredged up. A piece of wood may be dredged up once a year, but it is honeycombed by the boring shell fish and falls to pieces at the touch of the hand. This shows what destruction is constantly going on in these depths. If a ship sinks at sea with all on board, it would be eaten by fish with the exception of the metal, and that would corrode and disappear. Not a bone of a human body would remain after a few days. It is a constant display of the law of the survival of the fittest. Nothing made by the hand of man was dredged up after cruising for months in the track of ocean vesing for months in the track of ocean vessels, excepting coal clinkers shoved overboard from steamships.

"As to the quantity of light at the bottom of the sea there has been much dispute. Animals dredged from below seven hundred fathoms either have no eyes, or faint indications of them, or else their eyes are very large and protruding. Another strange thing is, that if the crea-tures in those lower depths have any color, it is of orange or red, or reddish orange. Sea anemones, corals, shrimp and crabs have this brilliant color. Sometimes it is pure red or scarlet, and in many specimens inclines toward purple. Not a green or blue fish is found. The orange red is the fish's protection, for the bluish green light in the bottom of the ocean makes the orange or red fish appear of a neutral tint, and hides it from its enemies. Many animals are black, others neutral in color. Some fish are provided with boring tails, so that they can burrow in the mud. Finally, the surface of the submarine mountain is covered with shells, like a sea beach, showing that it is the eating house of vast schools of carnivorous animals. A codfish takes a whole oyster into its mouth, cracks the shells, digests the meat, and spits out the rest. Crabs crack the shells and suck out the meat. In that way come whole mounds of shells that are dredged up,"-Golden

A Piano Manufacturer's Plaint.

A member of one of the best known piano manufacturing firms in this city told me recently that the business is being seriously affected by the rapid increase in the number of makers of cheap instruments. The newspapers are full of the advertisements of these deceptive individuals who for $100 or even less will sell you a piano. Although the price of one of these frauds as compared with that of a first class instrument is ridiculously small, my friend assured me that the profit can easily pay its share of its maker's advertising bills and leave a tidy sum over. The greenest of woods, the cheapest of strings, the most economical substitute for ivory in the keys and the shinlest of third rate varnish enter into its composition, while the workmen who hastily put it together work by the piece and are past grand masters in the art of scamping. A reliable instrument made of the best materials and in the plainest of cases cannot be sold at a living profit for less than four or five times the cost of these impositions which now flood the market.— The Epoch.

Withstanding Frost and Fire.

The Real Estate Record says that fire ruins show that porous terra-cotta bricks and blocks best resist fire, water and frost. Next to these in the order of fire resisting qualities come concretes and burned clay work. In the best work done the iron work is incased in porous terra-cotta tile or brick work in roof, floor and tile construction. The hollow tiles are faced with vitreous tile. slate or any good weatherproof coating, or with a single thickness of brick. Iron and steel framework incased in fireproof materials gives the best possible results. There is a growing preference for light porous walls of hollow material protecting an iron or wooden framework. Massive and heavy walls of brick or stone will do for architecture, but they are not as much of a mechanical necessity as they were regarded a few years ago. - Philadelphia

WINDHAM & DAVIES,

With few exceptions the east or northeast winds act unfavorably upon human beings. Dr. Richardson says: "That all nervous conditions in which, for want of tone is lowered, are much intensified by the east wind, and, indeed, the special action of this particular wind is to produce want of tone or debility. Under its influence almost all sick persons say they are depressed; they do not complain of reduced appetite, nor of pain intensified, nor of derangement of the secretions, but they declare that they are rendered prostrate both in mind and body. They are also more irritable in mind, which perhaps leads them to feel acutely the sense of prostration. In brief, if a single word were wanted to express the morbid effect of an east wind on the sick man, and on all the members of the sick community, that word would be prostration."

mortality of those who are suffering from diseases of debility of every kind is a fact that seems undoubted. The physician, through the whole of the spell of an east wind, will find his patients complaining of not making satisfactory progress, and will see extreme cases rendered more speedily hopeless-facts indicating the existence of a general and all pervading influence in the atmospheric sea itself as the cause of the whole of the evil. What that influence is, how the air is modified. whether it is modified by some change in the constitution of the oxygen, or whether it carries with it some foreign deleterious product, it is impossible to say, for up to this time no special chemical examination of the east wind has been made with the object of determining its special physical properties. We know the effects of it, and we know no more."—Herald of Health.

The professional man killers, or "bad men." may be horse thieves or highwaymen, but more often are neither one nor the other. Some of them, like some of derived from its sale is quite large and it | the Texan cowboys, become very experi in the use of the revolver, their invariable standby; but in the open a cool man with a rifle is always an overmatch for one of them, unless at very close quarters, on account of the superiority of his weapon. Some of the "bad men" are quiet, good fellows, who have been driven into their career by accident. One of them has perhaps at some time killed a man in self defense; he acquires some reputation, and the neighboring bullies get to look on him as a rival whom it would be an honor to slay; so that from that time on he must be ever on the watch, must learn to draw quick and shoot straight-the former being even more important than the latter-and probably has to take life after life in order to save his own.

At last one of the partners got a chance at his opponent as the latter was walking into a gambling hell, and broke his back near the hips; yet the crippled, mortally wounded man twisted around as he fell and shot his slayer dead. Then, knowing that he had but a few moments to live, and expecting that his other foe would run up on hearing the shooting, he dragged himself by his arms out into the street. Immediately afterwards, as he anticipated, the second partner appeared, and was killed on the spot. The victor did not live twenty minutes. As in most of these encounters, all of the men who were killed deserved their fate. In my own not very extensive experience I can recall but one man killed in these fights whose death was regretted, and he was slain by a European. Generally every one is heartily glad to hear of the death of either of the contestants, and the only regret is that the other survives.—Theodore Roosevelt in The Century.

"Bad Men" of the Frontler.

Some of these men are brave only be-cause of their confidence in their own skill and strength; once convince them that they are overmatched and they turn into abject cowards. Others have nerves of steel and will face any odds, or certain death itself, without flinching a hand breadth. I was once staying in a town where a desperately plucky fight took place. A noted desperado, an Arkansas man, had become involved in a quarrel with two others of the same kind, both Irishmen and partners. For several days all three lurked about the saloon infested streets of the roaring little board and cen. vas "city," each trying to get "the drop"

The importance of the results of the present political campaign can not be overestimated by those who desire the success of the Republican party. The Democrats, besides the "Solid South," are, in the North intrenched behind breactworks of public patronage. It will take steady, earnest, and united work to dislodge them.
