

The Rally at Ashland.

From Saturday's Daily.

The special was advertised to leave the depot here at 6:30 last evening, but as all preparations for the departure could not be made by that time, the train did not pull out until after 7 o'clock. It is estimated that from four to five hundred people went from here. The young ladies club here turned out about fifty strong and looked very charming with their dark blue dresses with white star decorations. The young men's republican club also turned out in fine style, with the B. & M. band at their head. The whole crowd became quite enthusiastic before the train pulled out; all were evidently bent on having a good time. Delegations were picked up at different towns along the line, and before reaching Ashland, the cars were crowded so that it was difficult to find standing room. The train arrived at Ashland about 8 o'clock, and the various clubs which had formed in line near the depot were awaiting the arrival of the delegation from Plattsburgh and intermediate points. Shortly afterwards every club had succeeded in forming in line with the procession and commenced the parade. The crowd was immense, and the illuminations along the line, very attractive. Several were heard to remark as they passed the private residences which were most beautifully illuminated, that they presented the handsomest appearance they had ever seen for anything of the kind. The procession was formed in the following order:

The Ashland band, ladies' republican club, umbrella brigade and Ashland dam-bau club, log cabin with its decorations of coons and conveying the veterans of 1840, Greenwood ladies' club and torch-light procession, Wahog band, ladies' club and torchlight procession, Plattsburgh band, ladies' club and torches. It was a grand procession, nearly a mile long, marching through the streets with flying banners and burning torches. The banners bore promiscuous inscriptions, among which were, "It and the red rag vs. Harrison and the American flag," "Nebraska's pride, Chas. F. Manderson, U. S. S.," "Grover's motto: Fish and Crawl," "Vote for our Tom Pickett for State Senator," "J. M. Thayer the People's Choice."

After the procession, the ladies' club were entertained to a supper by the young ladies club of Ashland, in fine style. It was estimated there were eight hundred in the procession. After the procession came the speaking, which had been arranged for, Senator Manderson at the opera house and Rev. Tate at the rink, both of which were crowded to overflowing. Senator Manderson began his speech by saying that Ashland, with her neighbors, has not painted the town red, but red, white and blue. These vast assemblages were more than marching and speaking; they mean victory. I mean that avoidpous must give way to brains. Grover Cleveland must give way to Ben Harrison. He gave a grand discussion of the tariff question, declaring that unless England succeeded in getting the United States to adopt free trade, she would herself adopt protection, which proved that the American system of protection was recognized as the most successful way of encouraging our interest and laborers. It has been the grand demonstration of the campaign, and every republican has gained new encouragement and is determined to work from now until the 6th of November with revived vigor, which will issue a rousing republican victory and the banishment of boodler McShane.

From Thursday's Daily.

No. 5 pulled through here yesterday in two sections conveying harvest excursionists from the east out west.

A chimney blaze from Judge Chapman's house last night, which lighted up that vicinity for about an hour, created considerable excitement. The blaze threatened more danger than was apparently realized.

There is a man in jail to-day who was arrested last night for stealing a fin overcoat. He is obstinate when questioned and will not give his name or any information concerning himself. Sheriff Eikenberry informs us that he answered the description of a man wanted out west for jail breaking. He will be held here until a reply is received.

The Oak street hill in the vicinity of J. V. Weckbach's residence is being graded down and a road made over it. The water company will be at another expense of lowering their main pipe on that street also. Already, as far as the work is completed, the street presents a much more attractive appearance and this improvement will certainly cause a boom to property along the line. To judge from present indications, the street will be one of the most desirable in the city when the work is completed.

A wreck occurred at the Orepolis junction last night in which an engine was disabled and four or five cars smashed up badly. An extra west bound train going over the main line had stopped about half way across the switch. Engine No. 112 was pulling an Omaha extra stock train to Pacific Junction, and it is reported that the engineer paid no attention to the semaphore which was shown and could not check the train in time to prevent the collision. No one was injured.

The Cleveland men say that Hill will run 45,000 behind the national ticket in New York, and the Hill men say that Cleveland will run 30,000 behind the state ticket. All that is certain in these arguments is that Harrison and Miller will carry New York by good safe majorities.

THE PEOPLE'S KITCHEN.

Food Furnished at Cost for the Working People of Switzerland.

During my recent vacation I had an opportunity of visiting one of the "Cuisines Populaires" that are coming to be a peculiar feature of some industrial centers in Switzerland. In 1877, while a socialist congress was in session at Chaux-de-Fonds, near Neuchâtel, one of the speakers said: "All the arguments in the world will not have as much effect on the working man as a good plate of hot soup." These seeds were sown on good ground, for a month later the first popular kitchen was opened, and similar institutions are now to be found in other parts of Switzerland. The aim of these kitchens is to supply working people with good wholesome food at cost price. They are not charitable institutions in any sense of the word, nor do they depend on contributions from the rich, nor on subsidies from the state, in order to keep them going. They are joint stock concerns, but in order to interest the largest number of persons possible in their success the value of the shares is fixed at a minimum sum.

The one I visited has a capital of 10,000 francs, 7,000 francs of which has been paid in, and the shares are held by very nearly 7,000 persons. It owns the building, occupies, which, though by no means palatial, is amply sufficient for the purpose. On the ground floor there are two dining rooms, large enough to accommodate from 600 to 650 persons, a smaller one for women, a waiting room and an office. The establishment is run on a strictly cash basis, but instead of paying with money customers settle by means of checks, which can be purchased in any quantities, and it is not unusual for workmen to purchase these checks in sufficient quantities to last them a month. The kitchens are all located in the basement, where is also the "cantine," a branch of the institution about which I shall say more presently. The bill of fare and the prices are the same in all the dining rooms. Three meals are served up in close succession, and as no one is allowed to remain at table after he has finished his repast, the institution is able to feed about 1,800 people daily.

Between meal hours food can be had by any who want it, but no wine is ever served except when accompanied with food. The prices charged are as follows: Soup, one quart, 3 cents; half quart, 2 cents; meat, boiled or roast, one-fifth of a pound if the latter, a trifle more if the former, 5 cents; a ration of vegetables, 2 cents; wine, 2 cents a glass, 3 cents per half pint or 12 cents for a litre; a ration of bread, 1 cent. So you see a person can have a square meal, consisting of bread, meat, vegetables and a glass of wine (and I may add that this latter article is of a good quality and sold pure) for 13 cents. The institution not only supplies its customers with meals, but also sells them cooked food to carry away with them. This branch of the bureau is conducted at the cantine, where prices for bread and meat are the same as in the dining rooms, but the portions are one-tenth larger, and two portions of vegetables are sold for 8 cents.

Cuisines populaires also furnish the public schools of the town with soup gratuitously and with bread at cost price. The managing committee are supplied with a certain number of checks that they can give away as they please, and all the food left over at the end of each day is distributed to the poor. The cuisine is managed by a board of directors who form three committees, charged respectively with looking after the wine, food and furniture. The employees are few in number; a stewardess, who receives a salary of 1,300 francs a year; a female cashier and cook, each of whom is paid 65 francs a month, and some girls to wait on table, who are paid 25 francs monthly. In addition to their wages all the employees are fed of course, and those who are only employed a few hours each day can gain the rest of their time in factories.—Henry Haynie in New Orleans Factoryman.

Fighting Grasshoppers in Algiers.

Various devices are resorted to. Two such are most in favor, the "meintinas" and the "appareilles cypriotes." The former consists of cotton or woolen cloth of a very rough surface, which is spread over the ground. The locusts are caught in the coating, are shaken together and are turned in deep ditches or stamped to death. The "appareilles cypriotes" are sheets of muslin about 200 feet long and 3 feet wide, stretched over frames and placed upright along the path of the invaders. It is the habit of the locust not to turn in its progress, but to endeavor to surmount every obstacle in its way. It will try to climb the cloth, which is beaten by sticks. The insects fall to the ground, are swept together and destroyed. The artillery also fires heavy charges of blank cartridges into the swarms, the cavalry is employed to stamp the insects into the ground, and the native troops are not furnished with rations of meat in order to stimulate their appetite for the great national dish, stewed locusts, broiled locusts and locust raw.

The Virtues of the Mule.

The mule is very rarely sick—not near so often sick as is the horse. Its hoofs are much sounder. It is not so apt to be injured, not being so easily frightened. It will do the same amount of work on two-thirds the amount of food required by the horse. It will eat coarser food. When properly bred and handled it is full as trustworthy and industrious as the horse, and more docile than the horse. The docility and patience of the mule is proverbial. The mule endures exposure better than the horse. It will endure heat better, and I have never been able to perceive that it did not endure cold as well, though the notion that it cannot is general. But there is no good reason why it should not endure the weather of the northern states. While the mule is most used in warm climates, it is also used in regions where the temperature is full as low as in our northern states, and there lasts longer than do our horses.—Country Gentleman.

A Terrible Downfall.

Mrs. Highprice—Oh, my daughter, we are ruined—ruined! Evelina Highprice (gasping for breath)—O mother, dear, tell me, tell me what has come upon us!

Mrs. Highprice (solemnly)—Daughter, our old coachman's beautiful lavender-painted carriage is too large for the lovely little dove we have just engaged.—Yankee Blade.

A Special Inducement.

Agent—I'd like to insure your life. Respectable Old Party—I don't want my life insured.

But we offer special inducements. Every policy is paid on death.

"Well, all the companies do that."

"Yes, but we pay up even if you are hanged. How's that for a special inducement?"—Texas Siftings.
