

SATURDAY.

Those wishing ice cream for tomorrow must leave orders early with James Antill.

The Farmers Alliance county central committee, are in session in Weeping Water today.

Chicago carpenters will now strike with mallet and hammers—a much surer manner than the threat recently indulged in.

Rev. J. D. M. Buckner will edit a column of amendment notes for the Journal, and he also extends the courtesy to the HERALD.

The clerk of the district court has the copy ready for the bar docket of the June term of district court and will place it in the hands of the printer today.

Every family in Plattsmouth should now read the DAILY HERALD. Just think of it! Three columns of telegraphic news for only TEN CENTS A WEEK.

Charles Dudley Warner's essay, in the "Editor's Drawer" of Harper's Magazine for May, will be devoted to a discussion of a man's position in the new social order.

We are glad to state to anxious friends that Charley Beeson, who has been very low with diptheria, is much improved, and in case he suffers no relapse is considered out of danger.

James Young was before his honor Judge Archer this morning to answer to charge of plain drunk. The judge gave him $10 and costs and in default of payment was sent to jail to board it out.

A special train made up of special car "Maid of Erin" passed through the city this morning enroute to Denver. The car bore the remains of Mr. Hughoot who was one of the leading officials on the Rio Grande.

No. 5 was an hour late this morning. This is becoming quite a common occurrence, however and it seems it will be necessary for the company to change the time; as it is this train can hardly make her present schedule.

There will be public worship tomorrow in the Sabbath School rooms of the 1st Presbyterian Church, corner of 7th and Granite Sts. Rev. D. R. Kerr, President of Bellevue College will preach in the morning at 11.

Wes. Grassman, who has been sick for some time, is sufficiently recovered to take a trip to Iowa today to recruit. He goes to Hamburg and from there to Des Moines and will probably spend two or three weeks visiting relatives.

Don't forget that you can get a first class Webster's Dictionary and the WEEKLY HERALD one year for $4; or the Dictionary and DAILY HERALD one year for $7. Come forth and help sustain the best newspaper Plattsmouth ever had.

George Vass has just turned out a fine lot of badges for the members of the fire department. The badges are made of silver and bear the letters P. F. D. artistically arranged. The boys are justly proud of their badges and we guarantee no department will display more tasty ones.

C. W. Sherman returned this morning from Omaha where he went to secure the services of Francis Murphy for a few evenings work in this city. We are glad to announce that the chances are good for securing him, and hope efforts of those interested in securing his services will be successful.

The social of the Y's held at the residence of Rev. Buckner last evening was an entire success. The ladies entertained about fifty people and made the occasion a very pleasant one. After being regaled with music for a time, the ladies served refreshments and closed the entertainment by making it a financial as well as social success.

(Mr. C. H. Parmele, as is his custom, took his Sunday school class up to Cedar Creek today to pic nic. Loaded into a big carryall drawn by four horses, they made a jolly crowd. Before leaving town they called on Jim Antill and took a can of this fine cream with them. If they do not have a fine time it will not be the fault of Mr. Parmele.

The work of the Rock Island is still something of a mystery. The people of Ashland and Greenwood and other small towns along the proposed route have ceased rejoicing and will await further developments. The work of Contractor Pritchett's men proves to have nothing to do with the Rock Island. The trouble in Lincoln over matters of right of way through that city is making further complications. The officials of the road demanded Eighth street or some equitable arrangements with the B. & M. for the use of that company's depot and tracks. Eighth street cannot be secured so the probability is that some arrangement will be made with the B. & M. Whether that will reach such a settlement as will run Rock Island trains over the B. & M. track from Omaha to Lincoln we are unable to say, but it looks as though that would be the result. Parties interested along the line hope that the new road will be built and are bending everything to that end.

The third quarterly meeting will be next Saturday and Sunday, conducted by Rev. L. C. Lemon. Services, as follows:—Saturday, 8:00 p. m.; Sabbath, 11:00 a. m., love feast, 3:00 p. m., young people's meeting, 7:00 and preaching at 8:00. We cordially invite the public to attend all these services.

J. D. M. BUCKNER.
W. D. Hewell's new story, "The Shadow of a Dream," the dramatic analysis of a remarkable complication, will be concluded in the May number of Harpers magazine. The next serial, beginning in the June number, will be Alphonse Daudet's humorous story, "Port Tartarin; the last Adventures of the Illustrious Tartarin," translated by Henry James, and illustrated by Rossi, Myrbach and others. This is the first time that the work of any great French author will be laid before American readers before the French public sees it in its own language.

The Journal says it has double the number of actual subscribers that the HERALD has and asks the advertising patronage on those grounds. The HERALD is no "wind Bag" but its subscription books are open to inspection and if the Journal will do likewise, and allow any three reputable business men to examine books and it is proven that its list double that of the HERALD, in the city, or even 100 greater, the HERALD will publish full page ads for the said three reputable business men free of charge for one week. Will the Journal now come forth and substantiate what it asserts, or hereafter hold its peace on the circulation subject?

The superintendent of census has approved Supervisor Cooke's plan for the division of the Third district into enumeration districts. The necessary blanks will arrive in a few days and then the appointment of enumerators will be made. The census department has decided that the law requiring the enumeration of large cities the first two weeks in June shall apply to Beatrice and Nebraska City as well as to Omaha and Lincoln. Accordingly the two former cities will be enumerated on the same plan as Omaha and Lincoln, which will make two additional districts to the Third district.—Lincoln Journal. What is the matter with Plattsmouth? It seems that few people outside of this city appreciate our importance. Just wait until after the census has been taken and we will show a population that will not need any inflation to make this the third city of the state.

Frank Dickson is now the happiest man in Plattsmouth. The HERALD is glad of it and sees no reason why he should be otherwise.

Rev. J. D. M. Buckner and C. W. Sherman passed for Plattsmouth pastors this morning. This needs no explanation, only that C. W. had just returned from his mission to Murphy, and after a night in Omaha.

Oliver C. Dovey
Has just completed one of the nicest and best arranged residences in the city. While the cost of the building will not be much above $8,000 it is a far better building than is usually erected for that money.

Mr. Dovey, fortunate in his location, has a beautiful south, and east front from a commanding point on North Sixth street. The residence is a two story brick with high basement, neatly designed verandas on the south and east, which, with bay windows of the latest pattern, add much to the external appearance. The plumbing and electric wiring throughout the house is very complete.

The main entrance is through carved oak doors set with stained glass on the south, opening into a capacious hall finished in highly polished oak; the main stairway located in this hall is of carved oak to match the surroundings. The double doors at the right of hall leads into one of most handsome parlors in the city finished in that beautiful native wood, white walnut; double doors to north of parlor open into a large sitting room in white walnut, which with its east bay window and open grate will make it one of the most cheerful rooms in the house; north of the sitting room is the guest chamber, nicely arranged; west of the sitting room is a gem of a dining hall with open grate, bay window on west and door south into hall and north into china closets and a modern kitchen with all the best and most convenient arrangements.

The upper floor is finished with every regard for comfort and convenience, bathrooms with hot and cold water, and closets ad infinitum.

BOYD AND HINSHAW
the carpenters who did the work, are deserving of special mention for the care and skill they have shown throughout the entire building. Mr. Dovey expects to move into his new home within a few days, where the HERALD hopes prosperity may always attend him and his estimable family.

$5.50 cash prize to farmers.

The Weekly World-Herald hereby offers a cash prize of $500 for the largest yield of corn grown on an acre of ground in Nebraska, or in any state bordering on Nebraska, during the year 1890, to which the Plattsmouth WEEKLY HERALD adds $50. to be given to the winner, providing he be a Cass Co. farmer. Rules and regulations for which are published in another column.

No person can compete for this prize who is not a paid up subscriber to the weekly World-Herald or who does not become one during the continuance of this offer which may be closed at any time after April 15 by the World-Herald on ten days publishers notice. After being so closed no new competitors will be admitted.

The $500 will be paid in cash to the successful farmer within ten days after the award is made, which will be as soon after harvest as completed as possible.

World Publishing Co.
By G. M. HIRNCOCK, President.
The World-Herald has decided to enlarge its big prize offer above made by the following additional prizes:

It will divide $100 in gold among the raisers of the next ten largest crops, being $10 each.

It will divide $50 among the raisers of the ten crops next largest to the first ten, being $5 each.

It will divide $20 among the raisers of the ten crops next largest to the second ten, being $2 each.

That is to say, in addition to the winner of the big $500 prize there will be thirty persons who will win prizes, ten will win $10 each, ten will win $5 each, and ten will win $2 each.

Now then, if you can't win the first prize may be you can raise a large enough crop to win one of the thirty other prizes.

Certainly somebody in Cass county ought to.

To any Cass county farmer wining any of the above prizes the HERALD will donate a year's subscription.

Sample copies of the World Herald may be seen at this office.

In the Interests of Missions.
Mrs. M. E. Roberts, state organizer of the Woman's Home Missionary society of the M. E. church, was in the city this morning looking after the interests of the society. She succeeded in arranging for a district conference to be held at Louisville on May 29th, which will be the first conference held in this district. Mrs. Roberts succeeded in interesting several ladies in the Mother's Jewel's Home which the society has located at York.

Advice of a Prominent Land Broker
Rheumatic Syrup Co., Jackson, Mich.:
GENTS: In February, 1889, I commenced using Hibbard's Rheumatic Syrup and Strengthening Plasters for inflammatory rheumatism, having been troubled three years with this terrible disease. My joints were swollen so that I could hardly walk and I attended to my business with difficulty. I used three bottles and applied the plasters to my limbs and back, and I can say that I am now cured. I have not been troubled with rheumatism since discontinuing its use. My father-in-law, Mr. J. D. Skinner, of Manson, has also been benefitted by this medicine. We earnestly recommend it to our friends. Take my advice, give it a trial.

LIKE THE SEA.
I would be like the sea, that wide expands,
And grows more infinite, as ages do—
Deep in my arms the utmost length of lands,
And I would love her depths, and be as true
To men as is the sea unto the sands.
I would be like the rocks along her sides,
My queen the pale moon, that bending low
Dips chasteningly their brows in the rising tides,
And begets pearls with them, and even so
The salt of truth that with the sea abides.
I would be like the crags above her piled,
And find the depth of anguish, ankle deep—
Wake with the morning and the shepherd's child
That o'er their foreheads whistles to his sheep—
Lashed night and day, and always reconciled.

LIGHT IN THE EAST.
Summer in Ontario is always delightful, but that of 1885 was especially so. The long days, with their hot noontides, had a tropical air about them that suggested palm groves, pomegranates and cinnamon. The nights were cool and refreshing, and the radiance of each sunset was eclipsed only by the splendor of the following sunrise. The stars were brighter, and the moon gave a clearer light than ever before. The clouds, blown by freshening winds, took new and fantastic shapes, and all nature, smiling in her superb beauty, whispered, Behold me!
It was on one of these fine summer days, in August, that the good steamship Alexandria touched at Massachussetta Point on her way up from Montreal. As the boat neared, a crowd of campers stood upon the dock, all of whom displayed an air of happy indifference, excepting Mrs. Secord, who, leaning upon the arm of her son, gazed intently toward the passengers. Only one disembarked—a lady of perhaps 40 years, dressed in French costume. Mrs. Secord recognized at once her sister, Mme. La Londe, whom she had last seen as Alice de Beaumont twenty years before. Of course there were embraces and laughter and tears, and then more embraces, until finally the French widow was led away to a group of five tents, the summer home of the Secords.

Mme. La Londe's story is a short one. The first eighteen years of her life were spent with her parents in Ottawa. She was then sent to Montreal to study, and there made her home with a married sister, who was ten years her senior. Two years later there came to visit at her sister's house an old friend of the family, Mr. George Carpenter, a man perhaps 50 years of age. Mr. Carpenter had a small income, to which he added by doing literary work occasionally. He was a bachelor, and had not a relative in the world excepting a half sister in Australia and two cousins in San Francisco. He was a talented man, with a warm heart and genial manner that endeared him to all who knew him. He loved every one in general, and gave this as a reason for never having loved any one in particular. But even Mr. George Carpenter was susceptible to the charms of the light hearted Alice de Beaumont—the "child of the morning," he always called her, for she reminded him of the glad sunrise that he so much loved. So the man of fifty actually became in love with the girl of twenty, and, O lamentable thought! the girl of twenty became in love with the man of fifty. What was to be done? Mr. and Mrs. Secord talked the matter over and very wisely decided to "let them love." So they loved.

Mr. Carpenter was the happiest man in the world. His great heart throbbled with a joy to which it had been a stranger for fifty years. He now loved every one more than ever. All the street Arabs in Montreal learned to know him. The poor sought him for his money and the rich for his mirth.
"Spring and Autumn have gone for a stroll," Mrs. Secord used to say to her husband when he would inquire for the lovers.
"Half a century, my darling," one day answered Mr. Carpenter as Alice wound her soft white arms around his neck and asked how long he had lived.
"Am I too old?" he inquired; then added, laughing, "What matter swiftly passing years if the heart remain young? My soul, in spite of these years, is filled with a joyfulness to which it was a stranger in what was called my youth. You are my youth, the glad, golden morning of my life; while I have you I can never be old."

Of course Alice promised to marry the man to whom she was all the world. But, strange to say, no one had the courage to impart this bit of information to Mr. and Mrs. de Beaumont, who were living a life of cold conventionality in Ottawa. It was finally decided that Mr. Carpenter himself should be the first to approach the subject. But love had been allowed to slip out of the life of Papa de Beaumont and Mamma de Beaumont, and they were shocked at the thought of their daughter's connection with a man who had neither youth, nor a name, nor a fortune. Alice must leave Montreal at once. Then followed tears and entreaties innumerable. Mr. Secord insisted that Alice should remain, in spite of the opposition of her parents. It was a time of great mourning for the parents refused to yield, and Alice left Montreal "bearing in her heart a life long sorrow." Three months later she sailed with her parents for France, where, nine years afterwards, she married a fat man with a bald head, a big name and a bank account. M. Alfred Eugene La Londe lived to see the fifth anniversary of his wedding day, then fell into his last sleep. Mme. La Londe remained in France until the summer of 1885, when she came to her sister in Ontario.

As soon as Mr. Carpenter fully realized his loss his grief was intense. He went at once to Ottawa, and with all the earnestness of a man pleading for his life, implored the parents of Alice to favor him. But all his pleading passed for nothing with the fashionable parents, and Mr. Carpenter returned to Montreal the most sorrowful man in the world. "The light in the east has gone out," he would sometimes say to his friends. "I thought it was morning, and behold it is midnight."
